SAVAGE ANTI-JEWISH RIOTING IN WALES

Disturbances Continued Yesterday—Evidence That the Movement Was Premeditated.

MANY SHOPS ARE LOOTED

Hundreds of Jews Fleeing by Every Train, Leaving Homes Undefended —Troops Wound Many Persons.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Aug. 23.—An astounding development has taken place in the unrest which has recently been displayed in so many of the industrial centres of this country.

This new phase is an outbreak of anti-Semitism in three towns of South Wales—Tredegar, Ebbw Vale, and Rhymney. Details given by the Cardiff correspondent of The Standard show that the mob savagery on Monday was of a most serious kind.

At Tredegar the Riot Act had to be read and fierce baton charges were made, the streets afterward being cleared by troops with fixed bayonets. Ebbw Vale and Rhymney for a considerable period were practically at the mercy of mobs. The numbers of persons injured and of arrests made were considerable, while the damage to property was on a large scale.

Unpleasant as these details are, the public will probably be even more shocked by the fact that the chief fury of the rioters was directed against a particular section of the community—Jewish traders who have established themselves in the towns concerned. The fact that their premises were singled out for attack and their goods looted reveals a phase of lawlessness happily unprecedented in modern times in this country. Abroad there have been anti-Semitic outbursts in various countries, but it has been the boast of Englishmen that their shores have never been disgraced by manifestations of such a kind.

Unfortunately it can scarcely be doubted that there was an element of premeditation in the lawless acts in South Wales. Shops kept by Jews were attacked in Tredegar on Saturday, though the outrages that night were on a much smaller scale than on Monday. Then, however, rumors were current all through the day that the proceedings of Saturday were to be repeated on a larger scale, and the actual happenings fully justified the prophecy.

Moreover, there was a renewal of the attacks in Tredegar yesterday in broad daylight, and on this occasion it was the private houses of Jewish residents that suffered.

Strong representations were made on behalf of the Jewish community on Monday to the Home Secretary, and assurances were given that no precautions would be overlooked by the civil and military authorities to prevent a recurrence of the outbreak.

It is well that this should be widely known, for there is, it appears, reason to apprehend that in other places there is a possibility of the unreasoning fury of the worst elements of the population being directed into the same channel as that favored by the rioters in South Wales.

In the course of a lengthy dispatch The Standard's correspondent says:

"Jewish shopkeepers were the chief sufferers in the rioting in South Monmouthshire, which is unparalleled since Chartist days. At Rhymney and Tredegar the crowds for some at present unexplained reason wreaked vengeance upon the shops of the Jewish section of the populace. Many of these suffered heavily, and much sympathy is expressed with them by their fellow-townsmen in their undeserved misfortune.

"At Rhymney, which was almost entirely unprotected even by police, the crowds indulged in horseplay most of the evening, but about 10 o'clock stone throwing began, and soon shop after shop was smashed in.

"It was a wild scene. The crowd surged to and fro to the accompaniment of wild cries and falling glass. Mr. Fine's outfitting shop was smashed, and similar treatment quickly followed to the premises of Mr. Evans, a grocer. The drapery establishment of Mr. Abrahams was also attacked. There was some looting, but the crowd appeared to be out only to do damage to property.

"Proceeding to High Street, they broke the windows of the house furnishing shop of Israel Fine, damaging other windows on the way. Heavy rain helped the police to scatter the crowd, which quickly thinned after 11 o'clock.

"At Ebbw Vale, however, matters took an even more serious turn, for, not content with window smashing, the crowd looted many shops belonging to Jews.

"Till 8 o'clock everything at Ebbw Vale was quiet, but shortly after that hour crowds began to congregate in large numbers in the vicinity of some shops owned by members of the Hebrew fraternity. Military and police reinforcements were sent for, but before they could arrive much damage had been done by the excited mob. They first attacked the shop of Mr. Pech, a Jewish tobacconist, and cigars, cigarettes, pipes, and walking sticks were carried away from Mr. Pech's shop. The crowd tried to get into the shop of Mr. Wiseman, a furnisher, but the window shutters were firmly fixed and the crowd was only able to smash [illegible].

METZ TAKES AIRSHIP TRIPS.

Declares That Aerial Cruising Is Delightful Beyond Description.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Aug. 22.—Ex-Controller Metz of New York literally "blew into" Berlin at 7:30 o'clock this morning. He was a passenger on the Parseval airship "No. 6," from New Strelitz, which landed after a sixty-five-mile trip that took about three hours.

Mr. Metz traveled to New Strelitz from Berlin yesterday by the same route. His fellow-passengers to Berlin included the hereditary Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz and Gen. Nieber.

"Aerial cruising," said Mr. Metz to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent to-day, "is delightful beyond description. My chief impression was of freedom from anything savoring of dizziness or seasickness. One had a complete sense of security and comfort, and I felt a good deal surer of reaching my destination right side up than one does on some American railways I could name."

Despite the progress that aeroplanes are making, German airship companies like the Parseval and Zeppelin concerns think there is a solid commercial future for passenger-carrying dirigible balloons. Aerial cruising is now a regular feature of German Summer life and seems to be increasing in popularity every day.

MAY SELL AMERICAN NEWS.

W. R. Hearst Reported to be Considering an Agency in Europe.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 22.—During William Randolph Hearst's short sojourn here many rumors have been current in regard to his activities in Europe, among them one to the effect that he is thinking of starting a news agency service designed to supply European journals with American news.

Mr. Hearst was seen by THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent late to-night at the Moulin Rouge, where he was witnessing the French edition of "The Belle of New York," in company with Mrs. Hearst and some friends. He smiled when asked about the news agency rumor, and said:

"I am really on a holiday trip and haven't done a stroke of newspaper work for months, but, now you have suggested it, I might think it over. The idea of a well-run agency supplying real American news to Europe is not bad, but, anyhow, the rumor that I have already begun negotiations is not true."

DOG ATTACKS CHILDREN.

Five Bitten in Its Wild Run Before Policemen Kill It.

While Miss Annie Johnson of 1,361 Schenectady Avenue, Brooklyn, was walking at Sterling Place and Schenectady Avenue with her eight-year-old brother, James, late last night, a black-and-white bulldog ran out of a vacant lot in Sterling Place and sank its teeth in the boy's left leg and right forearm. The sister thrust the boy behind a wicker gate, kicking at the dog as she did so. The dog snapped at her right leg and then leaped to her throat, tearing her right shoulder and chest badly before she got within the gate.

Darting down Sterling Place to Troy Avenue, the dog next met Miss Grace Arnsberger of 836 Broadway, Brooklyn, into whose left forearm it sank its teeth, tearing the flesh for several inches. A mob had meanwhile run up and frightened the dog away with stones.

The dog turned the corner and ran back to Sterling Place and Schenectady Avenue, where 4-year-old Grace Foster of 1,350 Prospect Place and 12-year-old John McCormick of 1,119 Prospect Place were at play. In a moment the dog had leaped at the little girl tearing her lip with its teeth. The boy grabbed the dog, only to have his own face bitten and scratched.

In the crowd that now ran up were Policemen Edward Coughlin and Patrick Doody. Drawing their guns, they held back the crowd and fired. One of the shots took effect, but the dog ran yelping up Schenectady Avenue to Eastern Parkway, five blocks away, where it crossed the path of automobiles and emptied the park benches quickly. Then running into Troy Avenue, the dog once more encountered the policemen and mob of pursuers, and this time a shot from Doody's revolver killed it.

The carcass was taken to the station to be examined by the Board of Health for rabies. The injured were examined by private physicians and their wounds cauterized. Several of them were seriously hurt.

BINFORD GIRL FEARS BEATTIE

Says She'd be Afraid to Go on Street with Him After Dark.

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 22.—To-day, while Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., is waiting in jail for to-morrow and the completion of the jury which is to try him on the charge of wife murder, Beulah Binford, the girl connected with the case by the prosecution, declared in her cell that she was afraid of him.

"I hope that Henry is innocent," said she. "Once I would have gone through fire at his word, but now I would be afraid to go on the street with him after dark. If he comes clear of the murder charge I hope never to see him again. Most of all I want to get away from Richmond, where I know people will follow me on the streets. I know absolutely nothing about the murder; I do not even recall that Henry ever mentioned his wife's name to me."

Beattie spent a quiet day in jail, refusing to see any one except his young sister, Hazel, and an aunt. He will be taken to Chesterfield to-morrow, where the task of completing the jury will be taken up again at noon. Paul Beattie, his cousin, who has sworn that he purchased the gun with which Mrs. Beattie was shot, lounged in the jail corridor refusing to discuss the case.

Always pictured heretofore as expressing absolute confidence of Beattie's acquittal, the statements made by the Binford girl this afternoon indicated for the first time that she had deserted him. She keeps pictures and cuts of him in a scrapbook in her cell, but she repeated time and again as she talked that she considered herself a mere onlooker in the case and was making a record of events and a diary as souvenirs.

Sheriff Gill has summoned a venire of thirty men, and the prediction is that the jury to try Beattie for his life will be complete before adjournment to-morrow. The Commonwealth has completed its list of more than seventy-five witnesses.

SPEAR BIG STURGEON IN THE HARLEM RIVER

Trapped in Shallow Water, the 406½-Pound Fish Is Captured with Pike Poles.

DEALER BUYS IT FOR $11

Thousands of Baseball Fans See It on the Way to the Polo Grounds—Fish Strayed from the Hudson.

It doesn't happen every day; but this fish story is true. It is vouched for, aside from several thousand fans who witnessed it on their way to the ball game, by the log entry of engineer James Clark, in charge of Macomb's Dam drawbridge which reads:

"At 1:15 P. M. Henry Essig and Thomas J. Bible harpooned a sturgeon in the Harlem River."

It is vouched for, moreover, by Tom Bible's oath, as well as Tom's Bible oath, given to Henry Ebbighausen, the fish dealer, who purchased the 406-pound sturgeon after it was landed, and in whose store at 2,673 Eighth Avenue the monster king of fishes lay last night on icy exhibition.

It was at 1:10 o'clock yesterday afternoon that a score of small boys, bathing in the Harlem River below Macomb's Dam bridge, suddenly scurried ashore, yelling as they swam that there was a shark in the water. Their cries floated up to hundreds of baseball enthusiasts on their way across the bridge to the game, and presently the bridge was blocked with a curious throng of watchers. True enough, rising near the surface of the water just north of the bridge they could descry what seemed to be a great shark.

Henry Essig, a bridge tender, who lives at Minerva Place and the Grand Concourse, and who had been putting in his vacation in a small motor launch he owns, was just under the bridge when he saw the huge fish and yearned for it. He feared, however, to scare it away with the noise of his motor. So, crying to Tom Bible, an oiler employed in the engine room under the bridge, to jump into one of the large rowboats with him, he grabbed up two long pike poles used in fishing large logs out of the stream, and pushed off.

Slowly and with noiseless oars they paddled out into the stream, while the crowd above hushed its excited clamor and watched them. The fish, however, got warning of their coming, and, turning about, swam toward the Bronx shore. The water there is shallow, and the change in position was just what Essig wanted. In a few moments he had brought the boat within a few feet of the huge fish, which now lay imprisoned in a narrow strip of shallow water only a few feet from shore, and seemed too frightened to venture a dart around the prow of the boat. The crowd on the bridge could see the huge snout-like head rise fretfully out of the water and bob down again.

In a moment Essig shot out his long pike pole squarely at the gill of the big fish. There was a convulsion under the water, and then the surface reddened. The crowd above broke into cheers.

"Quick, Tom! Give him the other hook! Quick!" shouted Essig.

Tom Bible did his best, but the great fish had already switched about, and mad with the pain of its wound, started away. The craft, a heavy rowboat, veered slowly around, and followed helplessly in the wake of the monster fish, Essig still clinging stoutly to his pole, which held in the fish. Bible's pike-hook fell short of the fish's body, but Essig held on.

The crowd, now more excited than even the ballgame could have made them, shouted frantic instructions to the men below. But Essig, who has quite a reputation as a fisherman in the neighborhood, knew his game and played it. Presently it became evident that the struggles of the captive fish were growing less violent. A sudden swish brought it once more within reach of the boat, and Bible's pike-hook shot forward and sank deep in the great dark side. Again the water reddened, and then, after a little while, the struggling ended.

Amid the hurrahs of the crowd the two victorious fishermen now proceeded to tow their prize to shore.

It was slow work, however, the great fish dragging like a huge watersoaked log behind their boat. When they did finally near shore, a rope had to be thrown down to them, and a dozen hands from above were found insufficient to heave the great fish out of the water and up to the bridge.

Immediately half a dozen fish dealers sprang up around Essig offering to buy the fish. The bidding started at a few dollars, but Essig said he's rather give it to the Aquarium than sell it cheaply. It finally went to Ebbighausen for $11. Ebbighausen smiled contentedly, loaded the fish on a wagon he had sent for from his store, and conveyed it to his place of business. There he weighed it and found he was richer by 406½ pounds.

"And it's a sturgeon," he announced with the eye of a connoisseur, as he dug a knife into a soft spot in the middle of his prize. He announced last evening that he had forty pounds of caviar there, but there was no Bible oath forthcoming for that. Ebbighausen, having cornered his prize, set off for Far Rockaway last night to buy a lot of oysters.

But there set up amid huge chunks of ice in Ebbighausen's front window—and so large that its tail had to be curled backward before it would fit there—lay the monster fish labeled:

"This sturgeon was caught in the Harlem River and 158th Street. Weight, 406½ pounds."

A great crowd gathered in front of the window all evening to gaze on the fish. Some of the fishermen declared the sturgeon must have swam into the Harlem River from the Hudson, it being just about an hour and a half after the young flood tide from the Hudson when the fish was sighted.

PLAN HARRIMAN LINE STRIKE.

Shop Men Expect to Go Out in Texas Within 48 Hours.

Special to The New York Times.

GALVESTON, Texas, Aug. 22.—So far as the Southern Pacific and Houston & Texas Central and other Harriman lines are concerned, the shop men may strike, and the fight is on which will bring out from 4,000 to 6,000 men in a few days.

The Harriman officials, through Superintendent of Motive Power J. J. Ryan, sent their ultimatum to the representatives of the shop employes, refusing to entertain their demands for increase in wages, shorter hours, scale of promotion, and system of giving men ninety days vacation in case reduction in force at any time becomes necessary.

The railroad management says the demands of the shop men are unreasonable and unjust, and that they will not be considered. The shop men expect to be called out within forty-eight hours.

The railroad officials' answer declares wages of shop men have been advanced from 12 to 30 per cent. on the Harriman lines within five years and yet the demands of the shop men now call for an annual increase amounting to [illegible]

GIVES UP SOCIETY TO ENTER A CONVENT

Miss Maria A. Hirst of Philadelphia Had Already Begun to Plan Her Debutante Party.

NUNS EDUCATED HER

Though Fond of Outdoor Sports Young Woman Had Always Expressed a Wish for Cloistered Life.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22.—Miss Maria A. Hirst, daughter of A. A. Hirst of Haverford, well-known in Philadelphia society, has decided to enter a convent in Albany, N. Y., according to a report heard by her friends in this city. Mr. and Mrs. Hirst and Miss Hirst are now in the White Mountains where, it is said, the young woman finally decided to take the veil.

Miss Hirst was to have entered society this Winter, and extensive plans for her ball and reception were already under way. No date has been set for her to enter the convent, but it is said she will do so within a short time. Last Sunday Miss Hirst left her Mainline home with her parents. She told none of her closest friends her plans for the future, but said she was going on a trip through New England. She did not say when she intended to return. Mr. and Mrs. Hirst are expected back some time next week, but it is said that they will see their daughter installed in the convent of the Sacred Heart in Albany before returning. Miss Hirst will enter upon a novitiate course before taking the final orders of sisterhood.

Miss Hirst's brother, William, married Miss Marion Halloway, a well known horsewoman, and both she and Miss Hirst were familiar figures at the various horseshows and race meets. Miss Hirst drove her own auto and was fond of all forms of out-door sport.

Recently Miss Hirst visited a Miss McElroy in Baltimore and it was then that her intentions of forsaking society life first became known. It was to Miss McElroy that she is supposed to have first confided her plans. Later many of her friends in this city heard of her intentions, but discredited the rumors. To some of her friends she had expressed an inclination for the life she is about to take up. She received her early education in a convent.

ALBANY, Aug. 22.—The Mother Superior of the Sacred Heart Convent at Kenwood, in answer to a question as to whether preliminary arrangements were being made to receive Miss Maria A. Hirst of Philadelphia into the convent said "Yes." All other information was refused.

HAMERSLEY ESTATE FIXED.

Boy of 18 to Get $5,784,756—Fees to Twenty-five Lawyers.

In a decision by Supreme Court Justice Harrington Putnam yesterday fixing the fees due to the twenty-five lawyers who have taken part in the Hamersley will contest, the Justice fixed also the amount which Louis Gordon Hamersley, son of J. Hooker Hamersley, should receive as his share of the estate.

"This decree should contain a recital," said the court, "incorporating in substance the referee's first conclusion of law, to the effect that the whole estate is adjudged to Louis Gordon Hamersley. The infant, Louis Gordon Hamersley, here recovers $5,784,756.43, less commissions, costs, allowances, and expenses."

Louis Gordon Hamersley is now only 18 years old. He lives with his sister, Katherine Livingston Hamersley, in the Hamersley mansion, at Fifth Avenue and Eightieth Street.

When Louis C. Hamersley died, in 1883, he left his estate in trust to his widow in her lifetime, to revert after her death "to the first male issue of my cousin, J. Hooker Hamersley." Louis Gordon Hamersley is the only son of his cousin, but Louis C. Hamersley's widow became the Duchess of Marlborough, and after the Duke died she married Sir William Beresford, by whom she had a son, about the same age as Louis Gordon Hamersley.

She managed the income from the Hamersley estate in such a way that she had invested a goodly sum for the son by her third marriage before she died. Her executors brought suit for an accounting of the money due Lady Beresford's heir. Another suit was brought by heirs of the family of Sarah Mason, whom the father of Louis C. Hamersley had married, to have the will broken on the ground that it suspended the power of alienation beyond the period of two lives, in violation of the New York law. It was recently decided by James L. Bishop, as referee, that Louis Gordon Hamersley is entitled to the whole estate as the will intended.

TRADE BOARD DROPS MILLER

Chicago Man Expelled for So-Called "Skinning Trades."

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 22.—Thomas H. Miller, Jr., a prominent member of the Board of Trade for almost twenty years, was expelled from the Exchange by the Directors to-day for uncommercial conduct. The specific charge against Miller was what is known in Board of Trade parlance as "skinning trades," which means the making of false returns to customers, or to commission houses for whom Board members are transacting a brokerage business in regard to trades made in the pit. The rules of the Board of Trade covering this offense are stringent, and any member found guilty gets little mercy.

Mr. Miller, whose father was T. H. Miller, Sr., who died recently, leaving the younger man a fortune of $500,000, has been identified with several firms, including Bunis & Stoppani and Laidley & Co. Mr. Miller also several years ago conducted a commission business in his own name.

A few days ago Miller's membership was posted on the bulletin board for transfer, and if the charges against him had not been preferred it would have been sold. Now his membership, valued at about [illegible], has been forfeited under the rules of the Exchange.

Distance still to go to complete the 1,265-mile trip to New York, 200 miles.

Special to The New York Times.

UTICA, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Harry N. Atwood, who is flying from St. Louis to New York, landed at Nelliston, just across the river from Fort Plain, at 7:05 o'clock this evening. He is 1,065 miles from his starting point and exactly 200 miles from New York City. He ascended at Bell Isle, five miles west of Syracuse, at 4:35 P. M. His time in flight was 2 hours 10 minutes without a stop. The weather conditions were very good, the air being calm all the way.

From Belle Isle, Atwood sailed around Syracuse twelve minutes later, turned his biplane eastward, and, swirling over the Indian battlegrounds of Colonial days, descended in the twilight into the Mohawk Valley, alighting in a field here at 7:05 P. M. The distance covered was 95 miles.

"The air was as dead calm as a pool," said Atwood. "Most of the time I kept my hands in my pockets or read a time-table."

Atwood believes he possibly may make New York to-morow, but more probably on Thursday, because, on account of the rough and wooded country from Albany down the Hudson River, he may be compelled to descend in difficult places or effect landings in the water. To do this he will have pontoons put on his aeroplane in Albany.

Atwood lacks just 99 miles of beating the international record, now held in Europe. On the last lap of his flight down the Hudson, after he has turned the corner at Albany, he will surpass the present record at Rhinecliff.

From here Atwood has 58 miles to go to Albany, which he is capable of making in one flight without a stop. The 142 miles from Albany to New York will require at least one stop to replenish his gasoline tanks. If he attempts to fly the 200 miles to New York to-morrow it will not be more than he already has accomplished, for in the first day of his flight he went the 286 miles from St. Louis to Chicago in one day. But Atwood is desirous of flying over New York City, and finishing within full view of the public, and with ample time before dark.

The ninth day of his flight Atwood finished without a mishap, although he flew most of the way in the twilight, and all of it in a dense haze. He flew over thirty-five towns and cities, including Syracuse, Rome, Utica, Herkimer, and Little Falls. Considering the delays incidental to starting and finishing, after he was in the air he kept up a schedule between towns equal to a fast mail train. It was the latest start he has attempted.

Delayed all day by a high wind, he had almost given up his plan to start, when at 4:35 P. M. the wind calmed, and he took advantage of it. To avoid the tall buildings he went around the southern outskirts of Syracuse, and, coming back again to the tracks of the New York Central Railroad, took an air line for the east. At Oneida, where he was reported at 5:33 o'clock, he showed a speed of 31 miles in 33 minutes, including the time for detouring around Syracuse.

Utica, 58 miles from the start, which he covered in one hour and 13 minutes, prepared a demonstration in a hurry. The townspeople had abandoned hope of seeing the airman and he was already in sight before his approach was generally known. Not to disappoint those who, the day before, had waited for hours to see Atwood, orders were instantly issued by telephone that all the bells and whistles in town should be sounded. In a minute the city was in an uproar.

People poured from shops and houses and climbed on roofs and railroad bridges, while sailing serenely in a haze to the North and hemmed in by the base of the Adirondacks on one side and a ridge of hills on the other the air tourist came into view. For twenty minutes, as whistles and bells continued their din, the air craft could be seen sailing down the valley.

It was almost dark when Atwood neared Fort Plain. He hovered a while over the town, and then selecting a clear spot on the opposite bank of the Mohawk River alighted, to the astonishment of a farmer, a half dozen angry dogs, and a barefooted boy with a wheelbarrow.

Atwood said on landing he did not consider his flight from St. Louis as anything remarkable.

"It's been just a lazy run all the way," he said. "Anybody could do it. If experiment in aviation would be confined to straight-ahead sailing I am sure the problem would be more quickly and sanely solved. The people who look from the ground up in amazement at seeing me at a dizzy height would be surprised at the simplicity of it. I sometimes fix my planes at the right angle and sail along without touching them for ten minutes at a stretch, and then lean back in my seat to figure out my location from the time table or eat my luncheon."

RAINEY'S BIG LION HUNT.

Writes That He Kills Twenty-seven in Thirty-five Days in Africa.

Special to The New York Times.

COTTON PLANT, Miss., Aug. 22.—Lions are being slaughtered like American rabbits, and Col. Roosevelt's record has been broken in Africa, according to letters received here from Paul Rainey, who lives in New York, Newport, Cleveland, and Cotton Plant, where his large game preserves are located. Twenty-seven lions were killed in thirty-five days by Mr. Rainey and his party during their first hunt near Nairobi, Africa. This feat was accomplished with the aid of bear and deer hounds.

"The only way to hunt lions is with dogs," says the letter from Mr. Rainey. "Heretofore records show that one man has been sacrificed for every lion killed. Our dogs, however, take the chance out of the king of beasts and make the pastime more pleasant when the final death [illegible] is enacted."

The lions, however, have taken their revenge on the fancy priced pack of hounds Mr. Rainey gathered for the trip. An additional pack of hounds which were shipped from here were expected in Africa by July 12.

POPE IS NOW CONVALESCENT.

Very Cheerful and Walks in Vatican Gardens—Jokes with Chemist.

ROME, Aug. 22.—It may now be said that Pope Pius is entirely convalescent. Drs. Marchiafava and Petacci have ceased their visits to the Pontiff, but have recommended that he take the greatest care of his health and avoid fatiguing himself.

The Pope is most cheerful. To-day he walked in the Vatican gardens for a short time and seemed benefited by the outing. While in the gardens his Holiness met Father Prosdocimo, the Vatican chemist, with whom he joked about the recent heavy labors of the chemist in compounding medicines for him.

TAGGART'S CHOICE FOR 1912.

Says He Is for Marshall of Indiana and Denies Disloyalty.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 22.—Tom Taggart, former National Democratic Chairman, used a column of space in a local paper to-day to deny that he and Charles F. Murphy of New York and Roger Sullivan of Illinois are scheming to control delegations from their respective States to the National Convention in order that, when favorites are disposed of, they may use the delegates for their own end.

Taggart has declared that he will support Gov. Marshall, and favors Indiana sending a delegation to the National Convention for him, and denies that he is opposed to the Governor's policies. It is generally understood that Taggart is for Gov. Harmon, but will not oppose giving Marshall the Indiana delegation.

FROZEN ON PIKE'S PEAK.

W. F. Skinner and Wife Found Dead Near the Summit.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., Aug. 22.—W. F. Skinner and wife of Dallas, Texas, were frozen to death near the summit of Pike's Peak this morning. Their bodies, almost covered with snow, were found side by side by a boy walking down the Peak this afternoon.

Skinner and his wife started to walk to the top of the peak early yesterday afternoon and stopped at the office of The Pike's Peak News, about three miles above the Half Way House, to register. At that time Mr. Skinner, who was about 55 years old, doubted their ability to reach the top of the mountain. Mrs. Skinner, who was about ten years younger than her husband, is reported to have made the remark: "I'm from Texas."

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 22.—As both Mrs. George McFadden of Philadelphia and Thomas Sliddell of New York are good swimmers, perhaps it did not make so much difference after all about their going overboard from a canoe off Bailey's Beach this afternoon. Mr. Sliddell and Mrs. McFadden started over the sea in the canoe wearing their street dress. All went well until a sudden lurch and then the little canoe threw the two passengers into the sea well out from the beach.

Bathers and others about the beach saw the canoe capsize and the life boats go out for them. Mrs. McFadden swam well with Mr. Sliddell at her side. When the life boat reached them they were lifted in and taken ashore.

KILLED ON STRIKE DUTY.

Cleveland Policeman Shot Dead in Garment Workers' District.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 22.—Patrolman W. C. Chapman, on strike duty, was shot and instantly killed to-night in the Ghetto district. Police have so far failed to get any clue to the assassin. Chapman was detailed with others to this district, where hundreds of the striking garment workers live, and where there has been much trouble.

After the shooting a crowd of a thousand gathered, and the police reserves had to charge the crowd to clear the streets so they could conduct their investigation.

Chapman had been on the force nearly twenty-five years. He was ordered to patrol the district around Woodland Avenue and East Twenty-second Street, in the foreign headquarters. While there were large crowds of people on the streets all the evening, there was no disorder and the police were not called upon to do anything in the way of strike duty.

At 9 o'clock Chapman was at Woodland Avenue and East Twenty-second Street, talking to some of the people in the neighborhood. A short time later he walked into an alley back of the Parry Theatre, and a few minutes later a shot was heard. People, rushing into the alley, found Chapman lying on his face, dead. He had been shot in the back.

WOMAN CLIMBS A FENCE.

Takes a Short Cut to Catch Her Train at Tarrytown and Is Cheered.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Railroad fences are no obstacle to a New York woman when she wants to catch a train. This was demonstrated this afternoon when a well-dressed, middle-aged woman with her arms full of packages ran down the tracks as the 5:06 train came into the station, and called to Remsen Anthony, the doorman, asking if the train went to New York.

"Yes, madam," replied Anthony. "You must cross the bridge."

The woman saw the bridge, and she also saw a shorter route over the fence and made for it. Dropping her bundles she climbed the fence while Anthony and the crowd at the station gazed in amazement. Anthony ran out and gallantly handed her the packages she had dropped.

"Didn't I do it gracefully?" she asked.

"Just as well as any man could do it," Anthony replied.

The conductor saw the woman coming and he thought such a brave attempt to catch a train should be rewarded, and he held the train for her. As she stepped aboard [illegible]

'LA GIOCONDA' IS STOLEN IN PARIS

Masterpiece of Lionardo da Vinci Vanishes from Louvre—Known as Mona Lisa.

FRAME FOUND ON STAIRCASE

Picture Not Cut from It, but Carefully Removed—Army of Detectives at Work.

ONE OF WORLD'S TREASURES

Some Judges Regard the Painting as the Finest Existing—$5,000,000 Said to Have Been Offered for It.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 22.—Impossible as it may seem, it is a fact that Lionardo da Vinci's masterpiece, the "Mona Lisa," was stolen yesterday from the Louvre, where it had been exhibited in the famous Salon Carré for the last five years.

The news, which was made public by a short announcement in the Temps at 5 P. M. to-day, has caused such a sensation that Parisians for the time being have forgotten the rumors of war.

A great crowd collected in the neighborhood of the museum, where, however, no information was given to the public. The museum had been closed, said the policemen at the main entrance, because of the bursting of a water pipe.

When THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent arrived there at about 5:30 o'clock many Americans were standing outside the gates, unable to understand why they had been turned out of the Louvre. A party of tourists who had been "doing" the galleries since midday, had been requested to depart at 3 o'clock without any plausible explanation.

M. Bénédite, Assistant Curator of the Louvre, received the correspondent in his office immediately after the Chief Inspector of Police and sixty detectives, who had been searching every nook and corner of the many miles of exhibition rooms and corridors, had left the premises without having found the precious picture.

Last Seen on Monday Morning.

"'La Gioconda' is gone. That is all I can say," said M. Bénédite. "So far we have not the slightest clue as to the perpetrator of the crime. The picture was last seen in its usual place yesterday morning at 7 o'clock, when two of the guardians, busy, as usual, in cleaning the rooms, stopped before it and exchanged remarks about the enigmatic smile of 'La Gioconda,' which for centuries has inspired so many eulogies.

"Yesterday being cleaning day, the museum was closed to the public, and no one noticed the absence of the picture. This morning the guardian of the Salon Carré noticed its disappearance, but attributed it to the negligence of the official photographer, who often took it up to his own studio and returned it the next morning before the gates were open to the public. Toward midday, however, the man became uneasy and informed the Superintendent, who rushed to my office and told me nobody knew what had become of the picture.

"Twenty minutes afterward I was in the cabinet of Police Prefect Lépine, who immediately ordered the closing of the museum and dispatched in great haste an army of detectives, who after searching an hour discovered the heavy frame of the picture standing alone on a staircase leading to one of the cloakrooms.

"The frame bore no trace of violence. The thief or thieves evidently took plenty of time for the operation of dismounting the picture, and left the frame behind as too bulky. How he or they came or left the premises is as yet a mystery.

"Why the theft was committed is also a mystery to me, as I consider the picture valueless in the hands of a private individual. The case is now in the hands of the police, under the personal direction of Prefect Lépine and Supt. Amard."

The correspondent also interviewed M. Le Prieur, Art Curator of the Louvre, who said he felt certain that the picture had been stolen with a view to returning a good copy of it later anonymously. He added:

"I have studied the picture for years, mounted and unmounted, know every minor detail of it, and would recognize a copy, however perfect, after five minutes' observation."

May Be a Case of "Sabotage."

A different view as to the motive of the theft is entertained by Prefect Lépine.

"Whatever the Curator's idea may be," he told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent, "I have perfect faith in my men and am sure the picture is not now hidden anywhere in the Louvre. The thieves—I am inclined to think there were more than one—got away with it all right. So far nothing is known of their identity and whereabouts. I am certain that the motive [illegible] was not a political one, but may be it is a case of "sabotage," brought about by discontent among the Louvre employes. Possibly, on the other hand, the theft was committed by a maniac. A more serious possibility is that 'La Gioconda' was stolen by some one who plans to make a monetary profit by blackmailing the Government. Anyway, I think we will soon be able to locate the picture."

No information was obtainable at the Ministry of Beaux Arts beyond the fact that the permanent Under Secretary of Fine Arts, M. Dujardin-Beaumetz, who is at present at Carcassonne, has been telegraphed for and will be here to-morrow morning.

There have been no developments to-night except the information that the authorities seem to have ascertained that the theft was committed between 7:30 and 8:30 A. M. yesterday.

In the meanwhile, pending a further police search, the Louvre remains closed to the public.

Feeling here about the affair is intense. An extraordinary number of absurd theories are advanced, while there is general criticism of the Louvre authorities, who have proved unable to guard what is considered the most precious work of art in the world.

It will be remembered that about thirteen months ago a Paris weekly, the Cri de Paris, caused a sensation by its assertion that "La Gioconda" had been secretly exchanged for a fine copy, while the original had crossed the Atlantic to become part of the collection of a famous American amateur. The editor of the Cri de Paris told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent this afternoon that the story was printed only as part of a campaign against the Louvre authorities to induce them to keep a better watch over the treasures in their care. The campaign was begun after several cases of vandalism in the museum.

PARIS, Aug. 22.—The art world has been thrown into consternation by the announcement of the theft of Lionardo da Vinci's "Mona Lisa" from the Louvre. The first searches for the painting having proved fruitless, the Under Secretary of State for Fine Arts has lodged a charge of theft against a person or persons unknown with the Minister of Justice, who has appointed a Magistrate to open an immediate investigation.

The Under Secretary has also summoned all photographers who have the privileges of the Louvre, and the police are interrogating the curators and their assistants.

There is a scaffold against the façade of the Louvre, placed there in connection with the installation of an elevator. By this scaffold it would be easy to enter and leave the building, and a person acquainted with the interior and provided with keys to the various rooms could easily reach the Salon Carré.

About 800 persons, including copyists, photographers, workmen, cleaners, and officials, had access to the gallery yesterday. All of these persons have been interrogated by the police, but are unable to furnish the slightest clue. The police are hunting for a mysterious German whose continual presence in the Salon Carré recently attracted the attention of its guardians.

The celebrated engraver, Frédéric Laguillermie, who is working on a series of engravings in the Salon Carré, points out that the photographers who are admitted there on Mondays carry large boxes, and that it would be quite feasible for a stranger to enter on the pretext of carrying plates, &c., to the photographers, steal a picture, and put it in the box. Then, when the guardian's attention was relaxed, he could smuggle it out of the building. In the case of "Mona Lisa," however, M. Laguillermie admits that this would be quite a feat, as the picture is painted on a stout wooden panel and is heavily backed, and, therefore, it would require a person of considerable strength to carry it away.

Public opinion is greatly aroused over what is considered the inadequate surveillance of art treasures in the Louvre. Pictures are frequently removed from the walls and taken to the official photographer's studio without the guardians being informed.

Deputy La Roche announced to-night that he would interpellate Minister of Public Instructon Steeg to-morrow on the "Mona Lisa" affair and the measures the Government is taking adequately to preserve national art treasures from thieves, madmen, and vandals.

FINEST PICTURE IN WORLD.

Opinion of Some Judges—Pater's Beautiful Description of It.

"La Gioconda," said Walter Pater in a passage that is regarded by many persons as the finest piece of prose ever written in the English language, just as the picture is believed by many others to be the most beautiful ever painted, "is, in the truest sense, Lienardo's masterpiece, the revealing instance of his mode of thought and work."

"We all know," Pater goes on to say, "the face and hands of the figure, set in its marble chair, in that cirque of fantastic rocks, as in some faint light under sea. Perhaps of all ancient pictures time has chilled it least."

And then, after speaking of the question of the relationship of an actual Florentine woman to this creature of the artist's thought, Pater writes these sentences, that have entranced lovers of beauty of style ever since "The Renaissance" was first published thirty-eight years ago:

> The presence that thus rose so strangely beside the waters, is expressive of what in the ways of a thousand years men had come to desire. Hers is the head upon which all "the ends of the world are come," and the eyelids are a little weary. It is a beauty wrought out from within upon the flesh, the deposit, little cell by cell, of strange thoughts and fantastic reveries and exquisite passions. [illegible] commonplace; that it is the finest picture in existence has been the opinion of a number of those best competent to judge. It is said that $5,000,000 was once offered to the French Government for the picture. This may not be true, though the story has frequently been repeated, but it serves as a criterion of the value that is set on this magical little cabinet piece.

"La Gioconda," also called "Mona Lisa," is a portrait of Madonna Lisa del Giocondo [illegible]

According to legend, the painter kept the wonderful smile hovering round the mouth of Madonna Lisa while he was at work on the picture by having beautiful music continually played in the studio.

The frame from which the picture was removed is a finely carved one of Italian sixteenth century workmanship.

The only case in modern times comparable to the theft of "La Gioconda" is that of Gainsborough's "Duchess of Devonshire," which was taken from its frame in the showroom of an art firm in London many years ago, and after a long interval returned to its owners by the late P. F. Sheedy, a well-known American gambler, who acted as intermediary between the thief and the art dealers. Later the picture was purchased by J. Pierpont Morgan.

NOTES CAUSES OF POVERTY.

Middlemen's and Landlords' Profits Cited as Wrongs by Mr. Marsh.

Sickness, profits by the middlemen, extortion by owners of land, and the tariff are the chief causes of poverty in New York, according to a statement made last night by Benjamin C. Marsh in an address at the Labor Temple.

"There are always," said Mr. Marsh, "between 125,000 and 140,000 ill people in this city. Between 40,000 and 50,000 of these have consumption, the average duration of which is 500 days. So long as we continue to permit underfed people to occupy countless thousands of dark, unfit rooms, consumption, a disease of darkness, poverty, and overcrowding, and not merely of the lungs, will continue to take its toll of 10,000 lives a year.

"Middlemen extort on a rough average $50 a year from most families in the city, not a single middleman, but the series, each of whom secures a small profit on the groceries, meat, vegetables, milk, clothing, and shoes which every family has to have.

"The most important cause of poverty, however, and the one which is most far-reaching, but can, nevertheless, most readily be removed by legislative action, is the exemption of land values from adequate taxation.

"The average proportionate assessed value of many tenement apartments is $1,250, of the land on which they are located $750, a total of $2,000. The owner expects a net return on this $2,000 of 6 per cent., or $120 a year. He will admit, however, that the value of his land is created by the people who want to use it, and he can't show why he is entitled to as large return upon the land values created by tenants as upon the building whose value the tenants have not similarly created. If by any means the owners can be constrained to forego all but 2 per cent. net profit on this land, the ground rent would be reduced by economic laws at least $30 a year.

"Of course the manufacturer is also the victim of the landowner who confiscates the ground rent and gives up often many thousand dollars a year which would otherwise be available for higher wages. The only way to reduce the proportion of the ground rent which the landlord takes from tenants in tenements and tenants in factories, and to make him pay the taxes on buildings, is to lower the rate of taxation on buildings and to increase the rate of taxation on land. This will be partially effected by the Sullivan-Shortt bill now before the Legislature."

OFF TO FEDERAL PRISON.

United Wireless Officials Taken South to Serve Their Terms.

Col. Christopher Columbus Wilson, Francis X. Butler, and William W. Tompkins, who were the President, counsel, and local selling agent of the United Wireless Company, set off yesterday morning for Atlanta, Ga., where they will serve terms in the Federal prison for using the mails to defraud. They were taken from the Tombs to the Pennsylvania Station by Marshal Henkel and four of his Deputies, and there, after a delay of a couple of hours, got on a train for the South.

A curious crowd escorted the prisoners from the Tombs to the Sixth Avenue elevated. Wilson and Butler were handcuffed together and Tompkins was linked up with a Deputy Sheriff. They appeared to feel their shackles bitterly, and did their best to conceal them by pulling their cuffs over them. They had asked to be permitted to engage a taxicab for the trip, but this was refused them. However, they were permitted to engage the stateroom at their own cost, and in this Wilson and Butler will be accommodated with one of the Deputy Marshals, while Tompkins will have an entire section to himself. During the wait in the Pennsylvania Station the prisoners placed their hats over their handcuffs and tried to look unconcerned.

Wilson must serve three years, Butler two years, and Tompkins a year and a day. Tompkins was in the first place, sentenced to a year in the penitentiary on Blackwell's Island, from which he might have been released in ten months. At his own request Judge Martin changed the sentence to a year and a day at Atlanta, the shortest term for which prisoners are received there, as under the parol system there in force he may escape a third of his term. George H. Parker, sales agent of the company on the Pacific Coast, will leave for McNeil, Wash., on Friday. He will serve there for a year unless his appeal, now pending, has a favorable result.

No Discharge for Bankrupt Who Withheld Tableware from Trustee.

Judge Holt denied yesterday a discharge from bankruptcy to Christian Lindinger, restaurant keeper, formerly at 82 William Street, against whom a petition was filed on May 11, 1910, with liabilities of $11,302 and assets of $2,847. The Judge said:

"The evidence satisfies me that immediately before the bankruptcy the following things were removed by the bankrupt and have been kept from the trustee: Thirty-five silver soup bowls, silver sugar bowls, a coffee urn, knives and forks, cooking utensils, [illegible] worth of cigars, [illegible] the whole stock of [illegible] wines and liquors, delivered from Acker, Merrall & Condit the day before the bankruptcy, [illegible] a barrel of whisky, and a number of electric fans."

DIEGEL TO CONFESS; SENATORS IN TERROR

Sergeant at Arms of Ohio Senate Breaks Down on Day He Faces the Penitentiary.

MORE INDICTMENTS EXPECTED

Diegel Pleads for Protection for One Senator, a Personal Friend—Cleveland Newspaper Fined.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 22.—To receive promised immunity Rodney J. Diegel, Sergeant at Arms of the State Senate, who was recently convicted of bribery, to-day agreed to tell all he knows in regard to alleged corruption on the part of members of the Legislature and lobbyists. Diegel will be allowed one week in which to put his confession in writing. Had he not agreed to turn State's evidence he would have been an inmate of the penitentiary by to-night.

Unless the State is absolutely satisfied that the confession covers every phase of the alleged crookedness of the legislators it will not be accepted, and the promise of immunity or mercy will not hold.

It is expected that Diegel's testimony before the Grand Jury will result in the indictment of at least twenty more members of the Legislature.

Diegel was convicted July 3 of accepting a bribe from Frank N. Smiley, a Burns detective, and aiding and abetting Senator L. R. Andrews to secure a bribe from Smiley. Judge Kinkead announced that he would defer sentence until Sept. 1. This was in order to give the prosecution a chance to work on Diegel for a confession.

The prosecuting attorney learned immediately after Diegel's conviction that during the entire session of the late Legislature Diegel was in the pay of the Ohio Manufacturers' Association, which body was mainly instrumental in bringing the Burns detective here. Diegel reported regularly to the Secretary of the association in regard to his work in behalf of bills in which the association was interested.

Diegel declared he could tell nothing more than what had developed during his trial. Last night Judge Kinkead was called on the 'phone by a woman in Sandusky, who said she was the authorized representative of Mrs. Diegel, who, she said, was frantic because Diegel had been away for some time. Mrs. Diegel suspected that he was in hiding. The woman named two Columbus women, who she said were with Diegel, and through them, she declared, he had been paid a large sum of money by Senators jointly indicted with him.

On this information Judge Kinkead directed the issue of a capias for Diegel's immediate arrest. It was learned that Diegel was registered at a hotel, but he was found at the home of one of the two women. His attorneys declared he would appear in court to-day and the capias was not served. Diegel had a long talk with Attorney General Hogan and Prosecutor Turner last night, but he still refused to say anything in the way of a confession.

Early to-day, realizing that his fight was lost and that there was but one way to save himself from the penitentiary, Diegel sought another interview with Hogan and Turner and promised to make a full statement.

There are now pending twelve indictments against five Senators and six representatives.

Interesting happenings in the case began before the court on Aug. 2 overruled the motion for a new trial and deferred the passing of sentence indefinitely. At that time Judge Kinkead handed down a caustic opinion severely criticising the conduct of counsel and refusing to entertain seriously the motion for a new trial.

On that day Attorney John A. Egan of Dayton, personal counsel for Diegel, had a serious disagreement with other attorneys in the case. Egan quit the others, who represent almost the entire coterie of indicted legislators. He saw Attorney General Hogan and Prosecutor Turner. Knowing that his client had had his day in court and that he was in serious danger, he offered to compromise. He offered that Diegel would tell a part of what he knows. The offer was spurned. It was this fact which convinced the State of one important thing, before suspected, that Diegel wanted to shield one man. That man is a State Senator and a close personal friend of Diegel.

After the delay in passing sentence, which was brought about at the instance of the State on the theory that Diegel had agreed to confess, Diegel seemed no nearer than before to saying anything. Again a hitch occurred. Diegel was willing to talk, to tell all except what he knew concerning the legislative career of one man. Word was sent back to him that nothing but the full truth would do. Unless the court makes final judgment in the case before Sept. 2, the last day of the term, the entire proceedings of the trial at which Diegel was convicted would be set at naught. The term of court was to-day extended to Sept. 5, on which date Judge Kinkead will probably give Diegel a suspended sentence.

Diegel's action spread consternation among the indicted Senators and Representatives, and also among the lobbyists. They fear that this means their conviction of the charges of which they are accused. Care will be exercised by the State that none of those under conviction will have a chance to influence Diegel to change his mind as to his course.

"I feel confident," said Attorney General Hogan, "that we will secure a large number of convictions as a result of information that Diegel will give us."

Hogan said he was not afraid of any one tampering with Diegel. "He does not secure clemency unless he delivers the goods," he added. Hogan said that after Turner and he have read Diegel's confession they will, if they decide he has told all he knows, grant him immunity.

Judge Kinkead to-day fined The Cleveland Leader $500 for contempt, for publishing the names of two indicted legislators before they were apprehended.

MAY JOIN KUHN, LOEB & CO.

Chicago Hears That J. T. Talbert of City National Will Become Partner.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—Influential interests in the local financial district to-day asserted that Joseph T. Talbert, one of the Vice Presidents of the National City Bank of New York, is to become a member of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. The report could not be verified here among those who would be most likely to know about the matter.

Mr. Talbert was Vice President of the Commercial National Bank of Chicago before it was merged with the Continental National Bank, and is well known in banking circles throughout the country.

Local bankers expressed the belief that if the report is true he probably will go into the firm as the representative of some powerful financial coterie of banking interests.

Neither Vice President Joseph T. Talbert of the National City Bank nor any of the members of the banking house of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. was accessible last night. The relations of the National City Bank and of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. have been of the closest for a number of years, the National City Bank and the banking house participating jointly in many large financial operations. Jacob H. Schiff, head of the banking house, is a Director of the National City Bank.

WANT DROVE TO RIVER.

Mrs. Mittelsdorf Declared She Could Not Go to Poor House.

Mrs. L. Mittelsdorf, who had lost her husband and all her five children, and was too ill to make her own living, applied each day to Miss Emma Koelle of 138 Concord Street, Brooklyn, to know the outcome of an application Miss Koelle's Church Aid Society had made for her for a resting place at a Home for Aged Women in New York. She was told that the application had not yet been reported on by the institution. On Sunday the widow, on leaving Miss Koelle, said:

"I cannot go to a poorhouse. I would do anything rather than that."

Late last night John Gibbons, a watchman at the water front, saw a woman, clothed in poor black, stealing along the pier at the foot of Pacific Street and the East River. He followed her to the end of the pier, but before he reached her she had jumped overboard. Gibbons sprang in after her, but in the darkness could not find her for several minutes. When he drew her out of the water under the pier she was dead.

In her dress were found three envelopes, one of them bearing the name and address of Miss Koelle. A member of the Koelle family went to the Amity Street Police Station to identify her.

MRS. STUART ROBSON HURT.

Actress Thrown Against Seat of Carriage and Cut on Forehead.

RED BANK, N. J., Aug. 22.—Mrs. Stuart Robson, the actress, widow of Stuart Robson, is suffering from an injury received in an accident yesterday afternoon.

She had been with William A. Hopping, a real estate broker, to look at some property she was contemplating buying, and was on the way home, when the kingbolt of the carriage broke and the shafts dropped on the horse's heels, causing it to jump violently forward. Mrs. Robson was riding on the rear seat, and she was thrown forward against the back of the front seat, receiving an injury to her forehead.

She was taken to the Globe Hotel, where she is stopping, and Dr. Edwin Field found she had a scalp wound an inch and a half above the eyebrow. Eight stitches were required to close the wound. Mr. Hopping was not injured.

EXONERATE UHLER.

Charges Brought by Capt. Harris, Deposed Harbor Official, Fail.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The committee composed of officials in the Department of Commerce and Labor to investigate charges brought by Ira Harris, the deposed Steamboat Inspector of New York Harbor, against Supervising Inspector General George Uhler, made a report to-day completely exonerating Mr. Uhler.

The charges were that the Supervising Inspector General had made misstatements about his official duties, and the committee finds that what actually occurred was that in making statements about points of law he ran counter to the opinion of the deposed official, and that was the extent of the offense.

The committee consisted of Assistant Secretary Cable, Commissioner of Labor Neill, and the Solicitor of the Department. They have been investigating the charges for about two weeks.

CURATE OF HARRIMAN CHURCH IS MISSING

The Rev. Henry Harvest, Assistant to the Rev. J. H. McGuinness, Suddenly Disappears.

SAID TO HAVE GONE WEST

Overwork Given as Cause of Unexpected Trip—Many New York Families in Congregation.

Special to The New York Times.

FISHKILL LANDING, N. Y., Aug. 22.—The Rev. Henry Harvest, assistant rector of Grace Episcopal Church at Monroe and the Episcopal Church at Arden, known as the Harriman church, disappeared last Thursday, and his going away was kept secret until to-day.

The Rev. J. Holmes McGuinness is the rector of both churches, and changes with the assistant alternate Sundays in conducting the services.

Last Sunday the Rev. Mr. Harvest was to preach at the Monroe Church, and when the congregation saw Mr. McGuinness in the pulpit the parishioners guessed at once that something was wrong.

When the Rev. Mr. McGuinness during the service made no other reference to the absent clergyman than to pray for him in his distress the curiosity of the congregation was still further aroused. Afterward Mr. McGuinness gave out a statement regarding his assistant.

> To the members of Grace Church, Monroe, N. Y., Brethren:—The serious disappearance of my assistant, Mr. Harvest, from Monroe on Thursday of last week and his failure to meet his appointments since, call for a statement from me. Although unknown to me until the last day or two Mr. Harvest was the victim of a peculiar mental disease from which he had recovered to such an extent that it was not apparent even to those who saw him frequently.
>
> You all know how enthusiastically he entered into his parish duties and the interest he exhibited in the athletic sports of the young men of Monroe.
>
> For several weeks—the first part of August and the last of July—he maintained a camp for the boys at Walton Lake and this was a great strain upon his nervous system. During this time also, in addition to his church duties, he was preparing for some examinations that were to be held in the Autumn.
>
> I have learned since his disappearance that it was his habit to study often up to 2 o'clock in the morning.
>
> His whereabouts are unknown to me. I was informed merely that he was to be sent to the Far West, and that his journey would have begun before the news reached me.
>
> Faithfully yours,

P. R. R. Fight Smoke Convictions.

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 22.—Seventeen writs of certiorari were obtained in the Supreme Court to-day by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to set aside its conviction for ninety-nine violations of a smoke ordinance in Jersey City. After its conviction the company was fined $50 for each violation, or $4,950. It contends that there was no evidence to warrant the conviction, and that it has a right to operate soft coal burning locomotives in Jersey City.

Mr. Pech's outfitting shop, which adjoins his other premises. The police were now absolutely powerless. The looters had little difficulty in practically emptying Mr. Pech's second shop.

"The looting fever spread, and simultaneously the shops of Mr. Habacux, a general dealer; L. Golbblatt, an outfitter; Mr. Josephs, an outfitter; A. Wiselman, a furniture dealer; Mr. Siedle, a jeweler, and a number of other shops in various streets of the district were smashed and practically emptied.

"For nearly an hour the maddened crowd, which included many women, controlled the streets. On every hand were to be seen rioters emerging from shops, carrying clocks, watches, suits of clothes, boots, and other articles of clothing.

"Here, as at Tredegar and Rhymney, it was the heavy rain that fell shortly before midnight that did more than anything else to cool the fury of the rioters."

The Times says that practically every Jewish shop in Tredegar was looted. The Jews are much frightened and are departing from Tredegar and Ebbw Vale in hundreds by every train, leaving their homes undefended and uncared for.

LONDON, Wednesday, Aug. 23.—In the municipality of Newport yesterday there were serious anti-Jewish outbreaks.

Disturbances also occurred at Waunlwyd, Cwm, Abersychan, and Beaufort.

The rioters attacked women and drove them shrieking in terror from their houses.

The only motive for the outbreaks is said to be that the Jews have been charging high rents to the workmen and raising the prices of provisions since the recent strikes began.

STRIKE COMMISSION NAMED.

Asquith Announces Men Who Are to Inquire Into British Labor Trouble.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—The commission appointed to inquire into the troubles between the railways of Great Britain and their employes, which led to the recent strike was announced by the Government in the House of Commons [illegible] was Under-Secretary for Ireland in 1893-1902. The railroads are represented by Sir Thomas R. Ellis, Secretary of the Mine Owners' Association, and Sir Charles G. Beale, Vice Chancellor of the University of Birmingham. The representatives of the men are Arthur Henderson, Labor Member of Parliament for the Barnard Castle Division of Durham, and John Burnett, chief labor correspondent of the Board of Trade.

In naming the Commissioners, Prime Minister Asquith briefly congratulated the country that the clouds had lifted, adding, amid cheers, that the fewer words said in regard to the past at the present moment the better.

The personnel of the commission is considered to represent fairly all the contending interests. It will get to work in a fortnight, and is expected to issue a report within a month or six weeks.

The terms of the reference of the dispute to the commission are that it shall "investigate the working of the conciliation and arbitration agreement of 1907 and report what changes, if any, are desirable, with a view to a prompt and satisfactory settlement of differences."

The settlement arrived at to-day brings the Northeastern Railway into the agreement concluded at the Board of Trade conference last Saturday for the other railways. Liverpool now remains the only serious point of the labor trouble, the whole port there being tied up, owing to the difficulty that is being encountered in settling the strike of the tramway men.

Parliament adjourned to-day until October, the Government having decided that it was not necessary now to propose special legislation to deal with the industrial situation.

James Ramsay MacDonald, Chairman of the Labor Party, who took a prominent part in the negotiations for a settlement, was optimistic, and told the House that if the spirit shown on both sides in the course of the negotiations prevailed in future relations, the country had heard the last of railway strikes in this day and generation. However, he was unable to resist making a heated denunciation of Home Secretary Churchill and the employment of soldiers during the strike. He declared that the department which had played the most diabolical part during the whole unrest was the Home Office. Mr. Churchill's bulletins on the situation, he said, were "mischievous and inaccurate, and the expressions of opinions therein were not sensible, and the effect was to make the men more desirous of continuing the fighting than coming to a settlement.

"I hope," he added, "that we have heard the last of these fussy interferences by persons who do not understand the nature of the circumstances with which they are dealing, but who desired to find themselves in the newspapers day by day."

Mr. MacDonald complained bitterly of what he described as "a reckless display of military force."

Mr. Churchill held that if the authors of the strike had succeeded in their intentions they would have brought about a catastrophe compared with which the effect of a blockade by a foreign enemy would have been almost negligible.

[illegible] James Keir Hardie [illegible] of the Exchequer during the session [illegible] Hardie accused the Government of taking the side of the [illegible]

Mr. Hardie's amendment to the motion to adjourn was then defeated by a vote of 94 to 18, and Parliament then adjourned until Oct. 24, in accordance with the original motion.

LIVERPOOL TIED UP AGAIN.

Refusal of Municipality to Reinstate Certain Tramway Men the Occasion.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 22.—The strike situation here is proving difficult of adjustment, and as a result the work of the port is again at a standstill. Outgoing liners are experiencing difficulty in obtaining crews, and the Allan Line steamer Virginian has been unable to sail. Her passengers are quartered in the hotels.

A conference with a view to settling the difficulty was in session all day long, but adjourned to-night without an agreement having been reached. The whole trouble arises over the refusal of the municipality to reinstate 250 tramway men who went on strike. It appears that the loyal tramway men, who greatly outnumbered their striking brethren, themselves threaten to go out as a protest if the 250 strikers are reinstated, and the port workers refuse to resume [illegible] until the tramway men are taken back into the fold. The railroad men have taken sides with the striking [illegible] employes, and threaten to go out [illegible] unless they are reinstated.

SUBSTITUTE FOR LUSITANIA.

Caronia to Sail in Big Liner's Stead Aug. 30.

The Cunard officials in this city announced yesterday that as they had not received any notice of the departure of the Lusitania from Liverpool it had been decided to have the Caronia sail for Liverpool via Fishguard next Wednesday, Aug. 30, in the Lusitania's place. The Caronia is on her way across, and is expected to arrive on Monday. Should the Lusitania get clear of the Mersey with her proper supply of coal to bring her across she may sail for Liverpool on Saturday, Sept. [illegible]

The Mauretania sails to-day with [illegible] passengers in her first cabin, which the Cunard Company say is the smallest number she has ever carried on an eastward trip since she has been running in the service. It is also stated that the cause of the falling off in the traffic is the fear people have of being held up by the English strike and that they are going to continental ports instead. The [illegible] arrived yesterday from Naples, [illegible] days late, with leaky boilers, and her sailing date, which was Aug. 24, has been indefinitely postponed.

GEIDEL'S MOTHER PUT OUT OF COURT

Justice Did Not Want Her to Hear Prosecutor's Terrible Arraignment of Her Son.

THE JURY BOX IS FILLED

Two Jurors, Who Read the Confession of the Boy who Killed Broker Jackson in the Iroquois Hotel, Are Excused.

By order of Judge Crain the mother of Paul Geidel, the boy who is on trial in the Court of General Sessions for killing William H. Jackson in the Iroquois Hotel on the night of July 13, was ousted yesterday from the seat she has occupied since the opening of the trial, the counsel table, between the senior and junior members of the firm which is defending her son. Mrs. Geidel had been admitted within the inclosure reserved for those officially connected with the proceedings at the request of her son's senior counsel, former Judge J. A. Gray, who had urged that he was in need of her assistance and advice in selecting jurors, since he had infinite confidence in the ability of a mother to judge those who were to determine the guilt or innocence of her boy.

Mrs. Geidel was allowed to sit beside Mr. Gray while he questioned fifty-odd talesmen throughout yesterday's long session. The shaking of her head soon became to those in court a certain sign that the lawyer would challenge the talesman under examination.

When Charles P. McKenna, shortly after 4 o'clock, explained that he had refrained from looking at the newspapers and had not read the alleged confession of young Geidel to Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty, Mrs. Geidel smiled faintly and nodded approval. The juror was accepted, and he took his position in the twelfth seat in the jury box.

As he did so Mrs. Geidel looked beseechingly at her son, while he looked appealingly at the juror. Judge Crain observed the by-play and summoned Mr. Gray to the bench. After a few whispered words Mr. Gray escorted Mrs. Geidel out of the courtroom. He said later that she would remain nearby in case her testimony should be desired, and that he would probably put her on the stand as a witness for the defense. He explained her removal by saying it was due to "the natural antipathy to have a mother listen to an awful and terrific arraignment of her son."

After the jury box was full Assistant District Attorney Nott completed his opening statement outlining the facts of the case on which he hopes a first-degree murder verdict will be returned. District Attorney Whitman was an interested auditor.

Mr. Nott went into the case in detail, dwelling on the fact that the day before the murder Geidel asked his landlady if the bottle which was found in the room of the murdered man contained enough chloroform to kill a man. He also recited in detail the confession Geidel is alleged to have made to his roommate, that he had often seen Mr. Jackson with a large roll of money, and had gone to the murdered man's room with the intention of getting it. In conclusion Mr. Nott said:

"The law provides that a person who contemplates murder before committing it is guilty of murder in the first degree. When a person is killed while a felony is being committed against him the crime is also murder in the first degree. It is the contention of the State in this case that Geidel is guilty of murder in the first degree in both situations cited by the law. His question in regard to the chloroform shows premeditation, going there for the purpose of robbery, or the felony he contemplated makes him guilty of murder while committing a felony, or guilty in the first degree."

Throughout the recital of the Assistant District Attorney the defendant sat unmoved, although he seemed to be listening eagerly, and at its conclusion court was adjourned until this morning at 10 o'clock.

To get the twelve jurors it was necessary to examine fifty-seven talesmen. The defense used nineteen challenges, the prosecution used ten, and two were excused after they had been accepted because of the fact that they had read newspaper accounts of the case.

The dismissal of the two jurors was at the opening of the day's session, when there were six jurors in the box. It followed an effort by the defense to have a mistrial declared on account of the publication of a reported offer by the defense to enter a plea of guilty to murder in the second degree.

In urging his motion for a mistrial Mr. Gray declared the newspaper reports must have prejudiced the minds of the jurors and those talesmen who had not been called. He pledged his word to the court that the defense had not made public the offer, and Assistant District Attorney Nott said that he was equally sure that the District Attorney's office had not done so. Judge Crain denied the motion, but added that he would allow the defense to object to any juror who had read the report. Jurors Nos. 4 and 6, Robert D. Sterling of 19 East Seventy-seventh Street and Edward J. Sisley of 402 West 148th Street, admitted that they had read the newspapers and were excused.

The slow task of building the jury up from four men then commenced, Mr. Gray putting to each man questioned this hypothetical question:

> If you were convinced that the defendant met his death while attempting a crime against the defendant, and while the defendant was defending himself against the decedent, would the fact, if proven, that the decedent did, prior to the killing, steal from the defendant, prejudice you against the defendant and prevent you from rendering an impartial verdict?

Talesmen who answered that the fact of the theft of Broker Jackson's belongings had impressed them unfavorably were immediately challenged, as were those who said they had read Geidel's alleged confession.

The forty-ninth talesman, George L. Fowler, was rejected because he stated that he was a close student of detective work, and considered there were few better examples of good work than the tracing of young Geidel after the discovery of Jackson's murder.

The jury agreed upon consisted of Gabriel Marluck, 621 West 138th Street, foreman; Thomas Williams, 108 West 130th Street; Joseph H. Phinney, 130 West 112th Street; Nicholas Volkmann, 463 Matilda Avenue; Alfred W. Trischet, 506 Teller Avenue; William A. Christian, 1,024 Fox Street, the Bronx; John J. Schmidt, 971 Lexington Avenue; George L. Dann, 508 West 187th Street; Walter C. Gilbert, 108 East 101st Street; Max Leserman, 1,855 Seventh Avenue; Solon E. Summerfield, 140 Broadway, and Charles P. McKenna, 47 West Thirty-fourth Street.

THINK MOSS REPORT WILL FAVOR WILEY

Committee Said to be Practically Unanimous for Upholding Doctor in Pure Food Fight.

TO SUGGEST MANY REFORMS

Department of Agriculture May Come in for Criticism—Case Goes Over Until December.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The Moss Committee, which has been investigating the McCabe-Wiley feud, held an executive meeting to-day and decided to adjourn until December. The committee believes it has made a most successful inquiry into the controversy and that the report and recommendations will lead to legislation that will greatly improve the administration of the pure food law.

The committee did not take action on the merits of the case, but it is known that its recommendations will demand sweeping reforms in the Department of Agriculture.

The House, if it desires, can hold the whip hand in such matters, notwithstanding the fact that the department is of the executive branch of the Government. Should it so recommend the House may frame the next Agricultural Appropriation bill so that Dr. Wiley will be unhampered in his work in the Bureau of Chemistry, and it may refuse to sanction further expense on account of the Remsen Board, the Food and Drug Inspection Board and even the Board of Personnel.

It is stated on good authority that the committee is unanimous on nearly all questions at issue in the investigation. The voluminous record of the hearings has not come from the printer, and until this is received it is impossible for the committee to take official action.

The committee may reopen the case next Winter if it develops that there is additional evidence to be obtained. Chairman Moss said to-day that one question certain to be determined by the committee was the legality of the employment of Dr. Rusby, about which the present controversy at first centred. The committee will take into consideration the precedents established by the department itself when it engaged the expert services of W. H. Harris and the further fact that the Remsen Board is employed under a similar arrangement as that in the Rusby contract with the Bureau of Chemistry.

There is no doubt that the investigation by the Moss Committee has proved to be among the most important begun by the Democratic House. The testimony has revealed the hindrances thrown about Dr. Wiley, and it has been demonstrated that the administration of the pure food law has practically fallen into the hands of Solicitor McCabe, who is not a chemist, and the Remsen Board, which was not dreamed of when the pure food law was enacted.

Dr. Wiley is believed not to have suffered in prestige or public confidence because of the investigation, and the report of the committee probaby will be a vindication of the earnest work of the Chief Chemist to enforce the pure food law as he construes it.

The committee to-day inserted in the record a dispatch to The New York Journal of Commerce, which was testified to by Parker Willis, the Washington correspondent of the paper, at the request of the Chairman of the committee at the first day of the investigation. In the dispatch a remark by Secretary Wilson at the opening of the hearing by the three Secretaries last Spring in regard to saccarin was quoted. In his speech Secretary Wilson said, according to Mr. Willis, who was corroborated by others present at the hearing:

"I want you to understand that the Referee Board was organized and put into action for the purpose of conserving the interests of the manufacturers."

The dispatch went on to give some qualifying circumstances of the speech, but the committee would not allow it to go into the record at the time.

Yesterday Secretary Wilson, after he had concluded his testimony, charged that Mr. Willis had misrepresented him and read from the notes of the stenographer at the time of the hearing before the Secretaries and asserted that if Mr. Willis had gone on and quoted more he would have had a different story to tell.

Mr. Willis tried to get permission from the committee to put in the rest of his dispatch, but Mr. Higgins of Connecticut, who has an especial dislike for newspaper men for some reason, objected. To-day the committee took up the matter and decided that a gross injustice had been done Mr. Willis by the committee, if not by Secretary Wilson, and voted to put the entire dispatch in the record, along with Secretary Wilson's attack.

CONGRESS ADJOURNS MID QUIET SCENES

Senate Takes Frequent Recesses and the Usual By-Play is Lacking in the House.

TAFT'S COTTON BILL VETO IN

No Attempt to Pass It Over President's Head—Session of 121 Days Cost Only $808,836.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Promptly at 3 o'clock this afternoon a tap from the Vice President's ivory gavel in the Senate and a resounding whack from the Speaker's mallet in the House announced that the first session of the Sixty-second Congress was adjourned without day. It looked for a while as if an unforeseen delay in the printing of the President's message vetoing the Cotton bill would delay things, but finally a corrected copy reached the House in time to be read before adjournment. As the House made no attempt to override the veto, the message did not even reach the Senate, though ordered printed there as a Senate document.

The closing scenes of the session, which covered a period of 121 days, were quiet to an extraordinary degree. Tentative dates for adjournment had been fixed so often and later postponed that all interest locally had been lost, while the session itself had dragged on so long that little attention was paid to the proceedings of Congress. The Senate gallery had only its customary sprinkling of onlookers, and even the galleries of the House, ordinarily filled to overflowing, were comfortable enough. Mrs. Champ Clark and the Speaker's daughter, Miss Genevieve Clark, watched the closing of the session in the House.

Though the Senate did not meet till noon and only three hours remained before adjournment, not enough business could be found to keep it busy, and recesses were repeatedly resorted to. But in spite of the plentitude of time in the end one bill—a measure authorizing the erection in New York Harbor of a monument to the American Indian at the expense of Rodman Wanamaker—was crowded out, though it had passed both houses. After receiving the Speaker's signature a clerk ran with the bill to the Senate at full speed, but arrived just as the Vice President was making his farewell address.

As that address closed with the declaration of the adjournment of the session, it was not possible to secure his signature or that of the President—both of which must be affixed at the session. So the bill must wait till December.

After convening, the Senate spent some time in rushing through private bills, and then recessed till 2 o'clock. By that time other bills had come over from the House and Mr. Sherman signed them or submitted them to the Senate. A committee consisting of Mr. Cullom and Mr. Martin was appointed to inform the President of the close of the session, and another recess was then taken till 2:45 o'clock.

Many Greet the President.

By this time President Taft, accompanied by Major Butt, had reached his room in the Capitol, where he signed belated bills. His Cabinet officers had assembled before him, and members of both houses filed in to pay their respects. Here the committee from the two houses called on him and he informed them that he "had no further communication to make." He remained at the Capitol for some time after adjournment shaking hands with Congressmen of both parties and speaking to such of the employes as he knew.

Among the progressive Republican insurgents who greeted the President were Senators Cummins of Iowa, Bristow of Kansas, and Brown of Nebraska.

"I'll be out in your country before long," said the President to Mr. Bristow.

"We will be glad to see you," was the response.

Senator Luke Lea was the last Senator to greet the President.

"Give my love to your family," said the President.

The Tennessee Senator had informed the President that he would soon leave for Colorado, where Mrs. Lea has made a brave fight for her life.

When the Senate resumed its session a hint induced the Vice President to resign his seat to Senator Overman of North Carolina, and Mr. Martin of Virginia, the minority leader, moved the customary resolution and thanks and appreciation to the Vice President for his fair and impartial execution of the duties of the presiding officer.

Martine Praises Sherman.

A little out of the ordinary was the tribute then paid the Vice President by Mr. Martine of New Jersey. He read a little speech in which he expressed the highest admiration for the Vice President, and said that he hoped he would not again be a candidate for that office, as he did not wish as a Democrat to be forced to vote against him.

Then Mr. Sherman returned and at once began his farewell address. After thanking the Senators for their tribute he said:

"I am happy in the belief that a protracted and, at times, strenuous session, rather than generating ill-will or disregard, has brought us all into closer touch with each other."

Quiet Scene in the House.

Until the veto of the cotton bill came in at 2 o'clock the House marked time. The commonest thing done was for a member to get up and ask, "unanimous consent to proceed for ten minutes."

The veto message came in promptly at 2 o'clock and was read at once. The Republicans punctuated it with applause as frequently as a pause of the breathless reading clerk offered a chance. Mr. Underwood arose at the conclusion of the reading and said that there was no use of voting to pass the cotton bill over the veto and moved to refer the message and the bill to Ways and Means. The House agreed to this fixed course. With the committee the matter will rest until the whole subject of tariff revision legislation is renewed at the regular session of Congress which will convene at noon on Monday, Dec. 4.

Mr. Kincaid of New Jersey then "proceeded" for thirty minutes to read a very eloquent speech on Philippine independence. At his side sat Señor Quezon, one of the Philippine Commissioners, a circumstance which suggested to several wags who run in the same set with Mr. Kincaid to say that the talented young Filipino wrote the speech which Mr. Kincaid was putting in The Record as his own.

Mr. Fitzgerald read a statement of the appropriations and savings during the session, saying that the total of appropriations was $808,836. He declared that no session of Congress has ever run for so long a period and appropriated so little. One of his items in savings was the total reduction of current expenditures for the House $110,000.

Cannon's Last Fling.

Mr. Cannon asked to be permitted to proceed for five minutes and he did so, attacking the programme of economy which he said had been so much boasted about at the beginning of the session, and which had dwindled down to the amount named. At this Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania got up and "proceeded" to make mince meat of "Uncle Joe's" speech. He said that Mr. Fitzgerald's item was only a part of the savings the Democrats had effected. The grand total was $228,000.

Speaker Clark's farewell speech was brief and genial as he closed the first session of his speakership. Both sides cheered him when he thanked them for their co-operation. He said truly that there had been no harsh words back and forth and no disgraceful scenes. He refrained from making a single political allusion in the speech, and wished everybody a pleasant journey home, and that all might return safely in December for the work of the Winter session.

COTTON VETO MESSAGE.

President's Objections to Bill Similar to Wool and Free List Vetoes.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—President Taft in vetoing the Cotton bill to-day based his objections, as in his vetoes of the Wool and Free List bills, largely upon the fact that the Tariff Board had not as yet had time to submit a report on the schedule. He also declared that the Cotton bill was adopted without any investigation or information of a satisfactory character as to its effect upon the cotton industry.

The President objected especially to the attempt by Congress to add a revision of the iron and steel and chemical schedules to the cotton bill as amendments.

"I find," he said, "that there was practically no consideration of either schedule by and committee of either house. There were no facts presented to either house in which I can find material upon which to form any judgment as to the effect of the amendments either upon American industries or upon the revenues of the Government."

Briefly reviewing the manner in which the iron and steel and chemical amendments were added to the bill, the President said:

"I cannot make myself a party to dealing with the industries of the country in this way. The industries covered by metals and the manufacture of metals are the largest in the country, and it would seem not only wise but absolutely essential to acquire accurate information as to the effect of changes which may vitally affect these industries before enacting them into law."

Speaking of the cotton industry, the President said the capital invested in 1909 amounted to $821,000,000; the value of the product to $628,000,000; the number of wage earners to 379,000, making, with dependents, a total of at least 1,500,000 persons affected, with annual wages of $146,000,000. The bill would not have gone into effect until Jan. 1 next, and Mr. Taft said the Tariff Board would be ready with a report before that time. Investigation by the House Ways and Means Committee, Mr. Taft said, was purely for the purpose of preparing a bill on a tariff for revenue basis.

"Pledged to support a policy of moderate protection," he added, "I cannot approve a measure which violates its principle."

The President denounced the bill as "empirical and haphazard." This, he declared, was especially true of the chemical schedule, which has been revised in such a way as to increase the tax on certain chemicals instead of reducing them.

"These," said the President, "are some of the typical inconsistencies and instances of haste in preparation and of the error of calculation in the proposed sweeping horizontal reduction of a most important schedule in the tariff."

After citing a number of increases made in the chemical schedule, the President continued:

"But the most remarkable feature of this amendment to the chemical schedule remains to be stated. The internal revenues of this country to the extent of $160,000,000 are dependent on the imposition of a tax of $1.10 a gallon on distilled spirits. It has been necessary in all customs legislation to protect the internal revenue system against the introduction from foreign countries of alcohol in any form and in association with any other article except upon the payment of such a customs duty as shall make it unprofitable to import the alcohol into this country to be used in competition with alcohol or distilled spirits of domestic manufacture.

"Under the present bill all these precautions against the undue introduction of foreign alcohol in articles and compounds included in the chemical schedule are in fact abolished by striking out the specific duties per pound.

"I need hardly dwell on the disastrous effect such an amendment in reference to alcoholic compounds would have upon the internal revenue system of taxing the distilled spirits nor need I point out the opportunities of evasion and fraud thus presented. Of course the change was not intended, but, if this bill became law, it would be made.

"This bill thus illustrates and enforces the views which I have already expressed in vetoing the wool bill and the so-called free list bill, as to the paramount importance of securing, through the investigation and reports of the Tariff Board, a definite and certain basis of ascertained fact for the consideration of tariff laws. When the reports of the Tariff Board upon these schedules are received, the duties which should be imposed can be determined upon justly, and with intelligent appreciation of the effect that they will have both upon industry and upon revenue.

"Very likely some of the changes in this bill will prove to be desirable and some to be undesirable. So far as they turn out to be just and reasonable I shall be glad to approve them, but at present the proposed legislation appears to be all a matter of guesswork. The important thing is to get our tariff legislation out of the slough of guesswork and log-rolling and ex parte statements of interested persons and to establish that legislation on the basis of tested and determined facts, to which shall be applied, fairly and openly, whatever tariff principle the people of the country choose to adopt."

PRESIDENT OFF TO REST.

On His Way to Beverly to Play Golf Before Going on Tour.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—President Taft left Washington to-night for Rochester, N. Y., where to-morrow he will address the National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic and then proceed to his Summer home in Beverly, Mass. He was accompanied by Major A. W. Butt and Secretary Hilles.

It is probable that for the first two weeks of his stay in Beverly the President will deny himself to all callers and get just as complete a rest as golfing and motoring will give him. At the end of that period of seclusion the President expects to get to work on some of the speeches he will deliver on his forty days' trip through the West. He will not return to Washington until November or later.

COMPLAINS OF GOV. COLTON.

Secretary Stimson, However, Considers Porto Rican Charges Unfounded.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The Secretary of War has received a letter of complaint from Señor Don Callasso of San Juan, P. R., charging that George R. Colton, Governor of Porto Rico, has made himself the subject of criticism by the people of the island in consequence of numerous acts toward native Porto Ricans. Don Callasso incloses with his letter to the Secretary a copy of resolutions passed by the Alliance Porto Rican censuring Gov. Colton for his conduct.

It is stated at the War Department that while recently in Porto Rico, Secretary Stimson, who was accompanied by Brig. Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, inquired into the complaints which had already in one form or another reached the ears of War Department officials, and the Secretary came to the conclusion that there was no foundation for them.

FIND FRAUD IN INSURANCE.

Even Forgery and Theft Practiced, Says Joseph Button.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 22.—Many industrial health and accident insurance companies were criticised by President Joseph Button of Virginia in his annual address to-day before the forty-second National Convention of State Insurance Commissioners, which will continue through Friday.

President Button said that an investigation by a committee of fourteen or fifteen companies, doing a health and accident business, resulted in surprising disclosures.

"Instead of basing the adjustment of claims upon equitable principles," said Mr. Button, "some of the companies examined resorted to every form of trickery and deceit and even forgery and theft in order to escape their honest obligations. This was all the more outrageous in view of the fact that these frauds were perpetrated upon the poorer classes."

Gov. Francis E. McGovern welcomed the delegates. W. H. Hotchkiss, Superintendent of Insurance of New York State, made the response. He said it was the aim of the association that insurance of all kinds be [illegible]

CLARK FINDS HOPE IN PARTY'S RECORD

Has Redeemed All Pledges, He Says, and Will Sweep the Country in 1912.

GIVES CREDIT TO INSURGENTS

Mann, for the Republicans, Tells How Much the Democrats Failed to Do.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Champ Clark, Speaker of the House of Representatives, in a review of the work of the first session of the Sixty-second Congress, declared that the Democratic Party set a good example for Democrats everywhere and that the party had redeemed every promise it made in the campaign of 1910, when the Democrats wrested control of the House from the Republicans.

"At this session the Democrats have made a record which has surprised our friends and dumfounded our enemies," said Speaker Clark. "It has put heart and hope into Democrats everywhere. The extra session was extraordinary, not only in the sense of being a special session called by the President, but also in the amount and quality of the work done in the House by the combined Democrats and insurgents and the combined Democrats and Republican insurgents in the Senate, and especially by the unanimity of action developed by the House Democrats.

"It was predicted freely, vociferously, enthusiastically, and confidently by the 'standpat' press and orators that we would go to pieces. On that account, and by reason of that hope, they rejoiced that the extra session of Congress was called, so that we might go to pieces at the earliest possible date. But we have sorely disappointed all their expectations. We are more thoroughly united in the House at the end of the session, if possible, than at the beginning.

Set a Good Example.

"We have set a good example to Democrats everywhere. Sneered at for years as a party of mere negation and as being utterly lacking in ability for constructive statesmanship, we passed through the House more constructive legislation and better than has passed through any House in the same length of time in twenty years. We have set the pace in that regard for future Houses.

"We redeemed every promise made in order to carry the elections in 1910. We have economized; we passed the Reciprocity bill, the Wool Tariff bill, the Free List bill, the Cotton bill with the Senate amendments, which included the iron and steel schedule and the chemical schedule; we submitted for ratification a constitutional amendment providing for popular election of Senators of the United States; we passed a bill for the publication of campaign expenses before the election; we liberalized the rules, making the committees elective by the House; we passed a resolution to admit New Mexico and Arizona, and we passed a large number of other bills of more or less importance. It is a record of which we may well be proud and on which we will sweep the country in 1912.

"To show how completely the 'standpat' Republicans are demoralized it is only necessary to quote the newspaper statement that there was great rejoicing and congratulation at the White House because we failed by a scratch to get the two-thirds majority to override the President's veto, although we have only sixty-three majority in the House. To this complexion has it come at last, that the President, who rode into power by a huge majority, is glad to escape the humiliation of having his vetoes overridden in a House containing a majority of only sixty-three. Small favors are thankfully received by the Administration.

Hits at Cabinet Lobby.

"Notwithstanding the fact that four Cabinet members were on the floor of the House lobbying in favor of the veto with all their power, allurements, and patronage of the Administration to help them influence votes, twenty-two insurgent Republicans had the courage and manhood to override the President's vetoes.

"Whatever the future may have in store, the honor of having perfect unanimity among the Democrats and of achieving an extraordinary amount of constructive statesmanship at this extraordinary session can never be taken away from us. Every Democrat in the House and every insurgent Republican who stood up to the rack is entitled to his full share of credit.

"We honestly and persistently endeavored to relieve the people of some of their burden of taxation, but the President would not have it. To use a sporting phrase, 'He blocked the game.' On these issues we appeal to the country, feeling absolutely certain that as we have stood manfully for the best interests of the people the people will stand by us."

The four Cabinet officers to whom the Speaker referred as having been on the floor of the House when the tariff revision vetoes were pending in that body were Attorney General Wickersham, Postmaster General Hitchcock, Secretary of War Stimson, and Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel.

Claims of Republicans.

Republican Leader Mann of the House, in a statement issued to-day, giving the minority view of the work of the extra session, declared that the net result was to strengthen the President and weaken the Democracy, and that the Democrats, "trying to put the President in a hole," in tariff revision legislation had been "hoist by their own petard."

"The special session," said Mr. Mann, "was called by the President in the fulfillment of the obligations of his agreement with Canada to consider and pass upon the Canadian Reciprocity bill. That bill passed and has become a law.

"The Democrats in the House would have been wise if they had confined the special session to the consideration of the Reciprocity bill only. Instead of that they set out to show how they could bungle legislation. They prevented the passage of the constitutional amendment for direct election of Senators by insisting upon coupling with it another amendment to the Constitution to deprive the general Government of one of its necessary powers.

"They fought against publicity of primary election expenses until we strangled them into yielding. They nearly defeated Statehood for Arizona by insisting that Congress give practical approval to recall of Judges.

"While entering upon the domain of tariff legislation they have refused to consider other needed legislation. They refused to take up pension legislation. They declined to consider a bill fixing the tolls on the Panama Canal, a matter of urgent importance. We were unable to force them to take up conservation legislation and especially bills to protect and utilize the resources of Alaska.

"The principal legislation which this session has enacted is the provision in the Canadian Reciprocity bill admitting wood pulp and paper free from Canada. That provision in the law was drafted by me and enacted exactly as I had drafted it. Their acceptance of that provision was the wisest thing the Democrats have done."

Car Hits an Ambulance.

A Bellevue Hospital ambulance returning without a patient through Twenty-sixth Street yesterday was run into at Broadway by a northbound car. The driver, Walter Masterson, 23 years old, of 622 St. Ann's Avenue, Bronx, was thrown to the street and bruised. The surgeon, Dr. Hoffman, 25 years old, was thrown into the body of the ambulance and injured about the face by striking against the emergency lamp.

MANY LYNCHING ARRESTS.

Judge's Decision Alarms Those Present at Coatesville Burning of Negro.

Special to The New York Times.

COATESVILLE, Penn., Aug. 22.—The opinion handed down by Judge Butler in the habeas proceedings in the case of George Stahl, one of those charged with murder in connection with the burning by the mob of the negro Zack Walker, has greatly encouraged District Attorney Gawthrop in his investigations, and he announced this evening that wholesale arrests may be expected within the next few days. Clyde A. Woodward, 18 years old, a son of Joseph Woodward, a local hackman, was taken into custody this afternoon charged with murder and was lodged in the local jail here for the night instead of being taken to West Chester as were the others.

"We are going to arrest every one who was in that crowd which went from Coatesville to the hospital and then followed the lynchers down over the lawn to the fire," declared Mr. Gawthrop. "We have rounded up considerable evidence and we will arrest the guilty parties just as fast as we can."

It is probable that more than a hundred men may yet be taken into custody. Judge Butler, in his opinion handed down at West Chester this morning in the Stahl case, declared that those who associate themselves willingly with others who are committing crime are equally guilty with those who commit the act. District Attorney Gawthrop therefore is working on the assumption that those who went to the scene of the lynching as sympathizers with those who committed the crime are guilty of murder and liable to arrest. The opinion of Judge Butler has alarmed many who had thought they had nothing to fear, for if the District Attorney carries out his programme no one knows where the arrests will stop.

Many of those who attended the lynching feel that the opinion of the Judge implicates them for the reason that they followed the crowd and gave their consent to its action by their silence. Others who were at the scene, taking no part, but who later expressed opinions in public defending the mob, are also afraid they will be called to answer for their actions.

According to the District Attorney young Woodward admitted to the investigators that he was with the crowd when it left the corner of First Avenue and Main Street with the intention of lynching the negro; that he followed it to the hospital, climbed up the steps, and was around the fire when the negro was placed upon it. It is said that on the strength of the opinion of the court in the Stahl case Woodward, as well as a number of others who have been before the investigators in the course of the past week, may be convicted on their own confessions made as witnesses and which they felt they were perfectly safe in making at the time. The District Attorney announced to-day that he expects to get as many of the lynching cases as possible before the Grand Jury that meets in West Chester on Aug. 28 and try them during the session of court that convenes on that day. Counsel for the defense are already in Coatesville gathering evidence for their clients and are expecting a hard fight. At one of the hearings it was stated by a colored man that the mob was led by six men with guns, and this report got on the streets and created somewhat of a sensation. This testimony has not been corroborated, however.

TRACKED BY COUNTRYMAN.

Maurats, Who Killed Idusuki in Colorado, Off for Scene of His Crime.

Overmatched by the cunning and persistence of one of his own countrymen, Frank Maurats, a Japanese, who for four years has been a fugitive from justice, bowed to fate yesterday and left the Queens County Jail in Long Island City, in custody of Sheriff S. J. McAfee for Greeley, Weld County, Col., where he will face a charge of having shot to death a Japanese named Kirheuhina Idusuki.

While Sheriff McAfee felt capable of landing his prisoner safely in Greeley, nevertheless, he was accompanied on the return journey by Gike Yanuyuchi, who caused the arrest of Maurats several weeks ago at Rockaway Beach, where he was running a Japanese game.

Yanuyuchi was a friend of the murdered man and lived in the camp where on July 9, 1907, Idusuki was found dead and his camp rifled. Suspicion pointed to Maurats as the culprit, and the Japs in camp raised a fund and Yanuyuchi was chosen to find the culprit. He traveled thousands of miles while trailing the suspect, until finally he located him at Rockaway Beach.

Seeing the hand of fate had overtaken him Maurats made no attempt to deny his identity, but calmly submitted to arrest. Despite the apparent resignation of Maurats to his fate, Yanuyuchi, knowing the subtility and wiliness of his own race, chose to accompany Sheriff McAfee in order to insure the safe arrival of Maurats in the Weld County Jail. It is understood, however, that Yanuyuchi's task will not be finished until Maurats is tried and convicted and the sentence upon him is executed. Then he will make his report to his countrymen.

WHITE SLAVER CAPTURED.

Lured Girl He Met in Bronx Park to Baltimore Resort.

Alesio Genio of 2,183 Arthur Avenue, the Bronx, was arraigned yesterday afternoon before Commissioner Alexander on a charge of having violated the White Slave amendment of the Inter-State Commerce act by luring a German girl, Olga Tinker, to a resort in Baltimore. He waived examination and was held in $1,500 bail.

It is charged that Genio met the girl in Bronx Park and after paying her attentions promised to marry her if she would accompany him to Baltimore. He took here there on May 15. She was rescued almost by accident. Some immigration agents visited the house in order to find some women. They noticed the Tinker girl because of her ignorance of English and made inquiries about her.

The result was that the woman who ran the house was arrested, and a search was begun for Genio and another man. Oscar Gigmolo traced Genio to Philadelphia and Newark, and thence to this city, and he was arrested under the Federal law, which permits of his easy removal from one State to another. The second man involved has not yet been run down.

The Federal authorities believe that in this arrest they have unearthed a band of White Slavers, who have carried on an extensive business in many cities. They have frequented the parks to make the acquaintance of ignorant young women and have lured them away by the promise of good situations in other cities. A woman connected with the gang is said to use an automobile in order to impress ignorant girls with her wealth and thus induce them to go with her.

PRINCESS WINS IN ATLANTIC Y. C. RACE

Fifty-five Yachts Compete on Gravesend Bay in First Day's Contests.

LIGHT WIND, STRONG EBB TIDE

Small Craft Have Trouble Getting Around Windward Mark—Nautilus a Winner.

Fifty-five boats started on the opening day of the annual race week of the Atlantic Yacht Club on Gravesend Bay yesterday. It cannot be said that the skippers had the best of sport. At the start the breeze was light and from the southwest. As the afternoon advanced the wind almost died away, and, as the craft had to face a strong ebb tide on the last leg of their voyage, they all found it exceedingly difficult to get around the windward mark. As a result it was exceptionally late when the last yacht was timed by the Regatta Committee, Dr. J. E. De Mund, Chairman; Walter Sykes, Jr., Carlos de Zafra, and H. E. Boucher.

In the absence of the P boats that are being towed down from Marblehead, interest centred in the Q division. Eight yachts started, and although F. G. Stewart's Princess was the last away, the craft had exceptionally good luck in rounding Buoy No. 14, the windward mark, and was able to lead the fleet home. The yachts are racing for the Thompson Cup, and as Mr. Stewart already has a leg on the prize, he is exceptionally anxious to win the present series.

In a special class the New York Yacht Club thirty-footer Nautilus defeated the old P Class racer Crescent. On both corrected and actual time Joy won in the handicap class. Wink not only scored a win in the S Class, but was the first home in the race for the Lipton Cup. Scylla was the first of the new Manhasset Bay boats to finish, and Pixy led home the old boats of the same club. Other winners included Little Dipper, Skeeter, Posey, Mouse, Zip, and Adios. 55,000,000 FEWER TRANSFERS

Second Avenue Receiver Insists That 8 and 10 Cent Fares Are Not Excessive.

The difference that the abolition of the universal free transfer system has made to the public was brought out yesterday before the Public Service Commission at the hearing conducted by Commissioner Eustis on the proposal of the companies to establish an 8 and 10 cent system. It appeared from the evidence of Dr. A. W. Weber, chief statistician of the commission, that 55,000,000 fewer transfers were issued last year than in 1907, before the Metropolitan system was broken up.

George W. Linch, receiver of the Second Avenue Railroad Company, was examined and testified that his line issues few transfers at Twenty-third, Thirty-fourth, and Fifty-ninth Streets to the First Avenue line, and at Eighty-sixth Street to the line which crosses Central Park. He reckoned that the average revenue received from passengers over the entire system is 4.74 cents, and that consequently only .26 of a cent is due to the transfer system. The operating cost, irrespective of taxes, he found to be 4.11 a passenger for the entire system.

Commissioner Eustis pressed on the attention of Mr. Linch the increase of business that might follow an extension of the transfer system, but Mr. Linch was quite clear that the proposed 8 and 10 cent fares would not be too high, and he could not see that the increase in business would make the change pay.

It was also brought out that, although the Metropolitan is using the tracks of the Second Avenue road on Eighty-sixth Street, no transfers were given there. The law requires that when one company uses the tracks of another for 1,000 feet transfers must be exchanged. Mr. Linch declared that a great majority of the Second Avenue passengers are of the "long haul" variety, and that this must be considered in reckoning the advantage to his company of a transfer system.

A brief passage at arms took place between Assemblyman Mark Goldberg, who has a bill before the Legislature with reference to free transfers, and Mr. Linch. The Assemblyman wanted to know about the horse cars which cross the tracks of the Central Park Company at Fifty-ninth Street, which, he asserted, were marked with the name Metropolitan. Mr. Linch explained that these belonged to the Central Park Belt Line, and were merely proceeding along Fifty-ninth Street to and from the stables. Moreover, the word "Metropolitan" was not painted on them.

Mr. Goldberg still asserted that it was.

"Perhaps they have just been repainted," suggested Commissioner Eustis.

"Well, let Mr. Goldberg come along with me and see," replied Mr. Linch. "At any rate he'll get a free ride."

The hearing will be resumed this morning, when the Metropolitan Street Railway Company will explain its position on the transfer question.

GOV. DIX TALKS TO VETERANS

Tells War Story About Grant and Sherman to Illustrate Subject.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Gov. John A. Dix addressed the veterans at the National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic to-day. The Governor's theme was sacrifice and magnanimity, and to illustrate his subject he told the following incident of the war:

"When Sherman's all-devouring 'March to the Sea' had enthralled the imagination of the North demands arose for the substitution of Sherman for Grant, whom alleged brutality and recent disasters had placed under a popular ban. Knowing his chief, Gen. Sherman, following his most lovable and characteristic quality—loyalty—refused the supercession, and the stoical Grant wrote with his own hands these words: 'No one would be more pleased at your advancement than I. I would make the same exertions to support you that you have done to support me, and I would do all in my power to make our cause win.'

"That's the spirit of America—the spirit which made possible the reunion of our shattered States, which will illumine the progress of the future.

"A few months passed, and Grant had entered Richmond and was the National idol. Sherman in the South had offered terms of surrender to Gen. Joseph Johnston that were countermanded with bitter criticism by Lincoln's Secretary of War, and Grant in turn was sent to relieve Sherman and to consummate the closing act of Confederate submission. Grant obeyed orders, but his mission was known only to a few, and Sherman without impairment of dignity received Johnston's sword under the terms of surrender modified from Washington, and Grant departed without Sherman knowing at all, for the time, of the intention to temporarily degrade him."

Gen. Charles L. Davis of Schenectady, N. Y., was elected President of the United States Veteran Signal Corps at the meeting of the association held here to-day. Edwin T. Cowell of Boston and George A. Marshall of New York City were chose Vice Presidents and Charles De W. Marcy of Boston and Henry T. Wells of White Plains, N. Y., were elected Secretary and Treasurer, respectively.

The Civil War Division elected as President Col. J. E. Hyneman, Philadelphia, Penn.

Upon the Executive Committee of the Civil War Division are Gen. Charles L. Davis, Charles De Witt Marcy, James H. Kelly, Edwin T. Cowell, and E. H. Haskell.

OFFERS TO SETTLE CUSTOMS

Mr. Lincoln Willing to Pay All Damages to Get His Held Trunks.

E. R. Lincoln, a well-to-do cigar manufacturer of 18 Laight Street, called at the Controller's office in the Custom House yesterday and offered to pay $1,250 for the release of his baggage, which was seized on the pier the night he arrived on the Mauretania last week. Mr. Lincoln and his wife in the declaration stated that their joint dutiable articles amounted to $275, but upon examination of their effects the Appraisers valued their clothing at $800.

The amount offered yesterday by Mr. Lincoln represents the home value of all of the foreign goods, including those declared and not undervalued. This offer has been submitted to the United States District Attorney, and its acceptance will be recommended by Collector Loeb.

Jacob Adler, the Yiddish actor, who also arrive on the Mauretania last week, accompanied by his wife, appeared before Surveyor Henry at the Custom House yesterday to explain why he had not fully declared the value of his theatrical effects. He had paid duty on personal effects valued at $349, but had theatrical properties with him valued at $579, which Adler said he had taken from this country. He eventually agreed to pay about $200 duty in order to get his wardrobe released in time to play to-night at the Thalia Theatre in the Bowery.

POST OFFICE IS ROBBED.

Bars Sawed in a Rear Window, but Thieves Get No Loot.

The Post Office branch at 830 Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, was entered by burglars on Saturday night. The thieves got in by sawing the iron bars at a window in the rear.

No attempt was made to open the safe, the marauders contenting themselves with going through the cash drawers, which were empty. Besides a few loose stamps they got nothing. The mail bags were not disturbed.

The police believe the burglary was the work of amateurs and expect to make an arrest. Edward Thompson is the Superintendent in charge.

FRANCE REFUSES GERMAN DEMANDS

Semi-Official Note Calls Territorial Desires in Congo 'Manifestly Excessive.'

PREMIER SUMMONS ENVOYS

Jules Cambon, Paul Cambon, and Barrere Confer with Caillaux—Prices Drop in Berlin on False Rumors.

PARIS, Aug. 22.—Premier Caillaux is taking counsel of the best diplomatic and political wisdom of France during these days of uncertainty in the Moroccan negotiations with Germany.

The French Ambassadors at Berlin, London, and Rome, Jules Cambon, Paul Cambon, and Camille Barrere, who had been summoned to Paris, were received by M. Caillaux to-day.

Justin de Selves, the Minister of Foreign Affairs; Jean Cruppi, the Minister of Justice, and Théophile Delcassé, the Minister of Marine, also conferred with the Premier, who is preparing for a special Cabinet meeting to be summoned for the end of the week.

A cautious, but firm, semi-official note has been issued by the Government. It says:

> Ambassador Cambon will return to Berlin toward the end of August, probably about the 28th. In the meantime he will have in Paris several conferences with the Premier, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, and the Minister of the Colonies, concerning the subjects of his conversations with Herr von Kiderlen-Waechter, the German Minister of Foreign Affairs.
>
> Without endeavoring to prejudge the precise results, it is believed that the difficulties will find a solution. It is, however, true that such solution will depend upon two conditions; first, that the rights of France in Morocco be recognized without diminution by Germany, and regulated definitely in a manner to avoid all future complications; and, second, that Germany reduce her territorial desires in the French Congo, which appear to be manifestly excessive.

The Temps, in commenting upon the Moroccan dispute, says:

"France, which sometimes has fallen in with the illusion of universal peace, has ceased to regard as impossible a European conflict. We are convinced that nobody in Europe wishes such a conflict, which would exceed in extent and horror those of past generations, but we believe also that certain diplomatic methods founded on mistaken psychology may render inevitable a war which no one wants."

The Temps notes with satisfaction that Premier Caillaux can depend upon the unanimous support of national sentiment.

BERLIN, Aug. 22.—Rumors that a breaking off of the negotiations between Germany and France regarding Morocco was impending, were circulated on the Boerse after the close of the official trading to-day and caused a heavy drop in prices. Inquiries here show that there is no foundation for the rumors, which appear to have originated at Vienna.

The Government officials maintain their previously expressed belief that an agreement can be reached.

EARLE CHARGES CONSPIRACY

Prosecution for Tapping Wireless Charged to Plot of Jurors and Attorney

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 22.—Declaring that E. Tobias Earle had been indicted as a result of malice on the part of several grand jurors, District Attorney Fredericks and others, who had conspired against him, Earle's attorneys filed their answer to-day to the charge that the publisher had disclosed the contents of a wireless telegraphic message.

The grand jurors accused by Earle in his affidavit are Charles Wier, foreman; J. L. Matthews, secretary; S. G. Tyler and John Scott. Wier, it is alleged, has on a number of occasions stated that he had no use for Earle and no confidence in him. It is asserted that Wier exerted his influence on the grand jurors to have them bring in an indictment against Earle. The assertion is made also that District Attorney Fredericks bears ill will to Earle because the latter opposed his election to the office Fredericks holds.

After the motion to quash had been made Deputy District Attorney Horton asked to have stricken out large portions of Earle's affidavit as incompetent, irrelevant, and hearsay. Judge Bordwell, presiding, took the matter under advisement.

RED 'T' STIRS NEIGHBORHOOD

On Sign it Means Negro Tenants Are Wanted and White Ones Must Go.

That part of West 121st Street between Seventh and Eighth Avenues was agitated yesterday and all because the "T" in a "To Let" sign, which hung in front of the five-story brownstone apartment house at 217 was red. This scarlet letter means negro tenants, and the prospective ones were referred to a negro real estate agency.

Simultaneous with the appearance of the sign, seven of the present tenants, white folk all, received notice to leave on the first of next month, and the other eight tenants expect to receive similar notices.

Miller & Bernstein, who own the building, declined to explain their change of policy, but the neighbors intend to exhort them to change their minds. A meeting of protest will be held this morning in the office of Frederick Zittel, Seventy-ninth Street and Broadway.

In all romantic fiction it would be hard to find anything to equal this story of real fighting. LOU BETTS ATTACKS HIS WIFE'S DOCTOR

Breaks Into the House She Lives in at 2 A. M. and Pummels Dr. Leonard A. Jaslow.

BETTSES LONG SEPARATED

Dr. Jaslow Has Betts Arrested—the Latter Termed by His Wife "the King of Gamblers."

Lou Betts, appreciatively described by Mrs. Betts as the "king of all gamblers," bounded into 70 West Forty-fifth Street a little before 2 o'clock yesterday morning and engaged with all his might a man whom he found in the breakfast room with his wife. The residence is Mr. Bett's property and Mrs. Bett's home. The man who was beaten was Dr. Leonard A. Jaslow, of 206 West 121st Street, who indignantly explained his presence there by saying that Mrs. Betts had summoned him for professional services. The physician, besides being badly battered, was furiously angry, and it was on his complaint that Betts was arrested, and arraigned before Magistrate Breen in the Yorkville Court after breakfast.

Dr. Jaslow was there to tell his story and Mrs. Betts, nervous to the verge of hysteria, was ready also to accuse her husband of having made a preposterous and unjustifiable assault. The case was adjourned until this morning, when George Gordon Battle will appear for Betts.

Mrs. Betts was particularly startled by the entrance of her husband because he had not lived with her for several years, an the feeling between them is not the most cordial. She is suing him for separation, and only last week Supreme Court Justice Bischoff ordered him to pay her $600 a month pending the trial of the action. So long ago as September, 1908, Mrs. Betts instituted divorce proceedings, but these were dropped, and the present suit was not started until a month ago. Mrs. Betts charges cruelty on the part of Mr. Betts, and said that she had so little money that she had to sew for herself and the children far into the night, a task made none the easier by her conviction that their father is worth a million. Betts said in answer that he wasn't worth anything like that sum, and that Mrs. Betts drank too much.

The first hint of trouble in the wind came early yesterday morning to Policeman Burns, on his stationary post at Forty-fifth Street and Sixth Avenue. Betts and another man approached him about 1 o'clock and told him they might want an arrest made later. The first sign that the trouble had come was nearly an hour afterward, when Burns heard Mrs. Betts screaming lustily from the street.

When he got there he found Mr. Betts, Mrs. Betts, Dr. Jaslow, and Thomas Smith, an employe of a Broadway hotel, all joining in an outcry and the doctor and Betts each demanding that the other be arrested. Burns took them all to the East Fifty-first Street Station, and there the Lieutenant decided that Betts was the one to lock up. He was bailed out in short order.

Mrs. Betts was agitation itself, and had not calmed down perceptibly when she went to the Yorkville Court later in the morning. She was eager to have her say, and when the case went over until today, and Betts hurried by her, she exclaimed:

"You brute, I'll get you yet."

According to her story, which was borne out by her lawyer, Jacob Gordon of 346 Broadway, and By Dr. Jaslow's account, she was in an acutely nervous condition all last evening, and about half-past eleven, she went out to telephone to Dr. Jaslow, a physician, who began treating her only ten days ago. The doctor had retired, and as he came down from 121st Street on the surface car, it was after one before he reached the house.

It appears that while she was on her way to the telephone, she met Smith, to whom she spoke of the condition of her "nervous heart" as Mr. Gordon calls it, and whom she told of her intention to summon the doctor. That would explain how word could have reached Betts that he might find the doctor there later, for the doctor was so long in coming that Betts had time to be notified of the expected visit and time to tip off the policeman that excitement was brewing.

Anyway, Dr. Jaslow had been with his patient less than five minutes, when Betts and Smith sprang into the room. He had prescribed some morphine pills, and had told the butler to bring in a chicken sandwich and some soft drink for her to take before the medicine. Mrs. Betts was nibbling at the sandwich in the breakfast room, which is on a level with the sidewalk, when the excitement started. Dr. Jaslow wanted it made perfectly clear that the butler was present, the light was lighted and the shades up so far that anyone could have seen them from across the street. He said that he not only proposed to push the criminal charge, but that he would sue Lou Betts because, he said, he was beaten over the head and punched unmercifully, all in a twinkling, before he had time to think. He had some bad bruises and some blood-shot eyes to show the Magistrate in the morning.

Dr. Jaslow said Betts told him on the way to the station:

"I'll fix it up with you all right, I only want to get the children."

The children—a boy and a girl—are now in Mrs. Betts's custody. Her lawyer said yesterday that they were staying in the country with relatives of hers and the question as to who shall ultimately have possession of them will probably be decided at the close of the separation proceedings.

When Mrs. Betts was asked yesterday why her husband should have done such a thing, she said something about "insane jealousy." George Gordon Battle had a brief talk with Betts late yesterday afternoon.

When Betts, in court yesterday, was asked about his occupation, he replied that he was President of a Spring Water Company. One of the lawyers choked a little.

BIBLE LEAGUE BILL IN DOUPT

Question Whether It Reached Gov. Dix Will Decide Its Fate.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 22.—A bill to incorporate the Rev. Daniel S. Gregory, Carlton H. Tyndall, the Rev. E. E. Ford, and two others to be named a body corporate by the name of the World Bible League, which had been vetoed by two Governors, was introduced as the first bill in the Senate this year by Senator Timothy D. Sullivan. A corresponding bill was introduced in the Assembly by James Oliver on Jan. 26.

The Oliver bill was passed on April 28 and received by the Senate on May 3. There it lay in the Judiciary Committee until July 21, when the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

On July 28 the Bible League bill with five other measures, which had passed, was transmitted to the Governor, but strange to say the Bible League bill was not accepted and its number, "Assembly 1,381," had a pen stroke drawn through it. The bill went back to the Clerk of the Assembly.

The question now is was the bill in the hands of the Governor? If so, under the ten-day clause of the Constitution, the bill automatically became a law without the Governor's approval. Article 4, Section 9 of the Constitution provides that every bill "shall before it becomes a law be presented to the Governor."

The only question is whether the refusal of the Governor's clerk to receipt for the bill leaves it in the Assembly, or whether the delivery to the Governor, notwithstanding its rejection, constitutes delivery.

SPITE FENCE MAN FREED.

$1,000 Bond to Insure Good Behavior and Self-Banishment.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Aug. 22.—After serving thirty-eight days of a six months' sentence in the county jail, James M. Allgor of spite fence fame was released to-day. His freedom was brought about by his lawyer, William J. McFadden.

Allgor, whose spite fence brought him much notoriety and twice lodged him in jail, was sentenced on July 15, for accosting C. D. Halsey, a Rumson Road resident, and telling him that he had suffered for his crimes. A few days after he began his imprisonment, Allgor yielded to the importunities of his son and the spite fence was removed. Several efforts were made to bring about his release. He was obliged to give a bond of $1,000 to carry out the terms of his agreement. The contract is in part as follows:

> This is to certify that I, James M. Allgor of the Borough of Seabright, in the County of Monmouth and State of New Jersey, for and in consideration of the sum of one dollar and other consideration, do hereby agree and promise:
>
> That upon my release from the Freehold Jail I will not return to Seabright until January 15, A. D. 1912.
>
> That I will convey my property on the Rumson Road to William J. McFadden, Trustee.
>
> That I will destroy all post-cards in my possession, directly or indirectly; also all negatives of same relating to the fence which recently surrounded my bungalow on the Rumson Road.
>
> That no matter where, I will not accost in any manner, disagreeable or otherwise, any citizen of the Borough of Rumson or Seabright, and that I will never write any insulting or disagreeable letters to any citizens of said borough.
>
> That I will give a one thousand dollar bond conditioned for the faithful performance of the above-mentioned agreements.

It is understood that Allgor will reside at Plainfield until his term of exile expires.

WILL TRY TO FORCE GROUT TO TESTIFY

State Attorney General Says Bank Investigators Have Right to Subpoena Witnesses.

GROUT IS STILL DEFIANT

Declares He Will Not Appear to Tell of Union Bank Affairs Till He Knows What Questions Are to be Asked.

ALBANY, Aug. 22.—Witnesses failing to obey subpoenas to testify before the commission which is investigating the affairs of the Union Bank of Brooklyn can be punished for contempt, according to an opinion given to-day by Attorney General Carmody to State Superintendent of Banks Van Tuyl.

Accompanied by Assemblyman Goldstein of Brooklyn, Mr. Van Tuyl to-day conferred with Mr. Carmody to get his views on the contention of Edward M. Grout, former President of the Union Bank, that he could not be compelled to testify at the investigation. As a result of their conference Mr. Van Tuyl announced that contempt proceedings would be instituted against all persons not obeying subpoenas when the investigation is resumed to-morrow.

Edward M. Grout, ex-President of the Union Bank of Brooklyn, now under investigation, notified Deputy Bank Superintendent Edward L. Dodge yesterday that he would refuse to be a witness before the committee investigating the bank unless he was compelled to do so by the courts. Mr. Grout has been subpoenaed to appear before the committee at to-day's hearing.

Mr. Grout's letter to Mr. Dodge yesterday reads:

> Sir: I have a subpoena requiring me to appear before the Superintendent of Banks on Aug. 23 at 10 A. M.
>
> As I did last week in answer to your inquiry as to whether I wished to appear, I desire again to request information as to what are the matters about which you wish my testimony. During the period of my connection with the Union Bank, which was from a year and a half to three years past, there were thousands of transactions involving in every instance dates, amounts, and names as well as facts. It is not within the power of the human mind to carry all such matters at instant command. I desire to know as to which of these transactions my testimony is required so that I may, by necessary inquiry and research and by access to the books and records of the bank, refresh my memory and know assuredly whereof I speak. I, therefore, regard my request as a very reasonable one, the compliance with which can only facilitate a fair investigation.
>
> As I have already stated in public, I am advised that your proceeding, as conducted, is without warrant in law, and that, therefore, the appearance of any one before you, whether on subpoena or otherwise, is purely voluntary.
>
> I have not declined to testify, as has been erroneously stated in many of the newspapers, or to give you any information in my power to give, nor have I any intention of so doing, but I do decline, and unless the courts hold that you have legally the power that you are asserting, shall continue to decline to appear as a witness without advice in advance as to which of the thousands of transactions occurring so long ago you desire to examine into or have explained. If the courts decide against the advice which has been given me, I will very cheerfully comply with their direction. Or if you give me the information I request I will as cheerfully comply with your subpoena.
>
> I am giving this letter to the newspapers without waiting for it to reach your hands so that it may be printed in full and not subjected to the choice variety of false constructions, which seems to have emanated either from you or your representatives as to my letter to you last week. Yours very truly,
>
> EDWARD M. GROUT.

District Attorney Clarke was in conference yesterday with Deputy Supt. Dodge and James C. Cropsey at the offices of the Union Bank. He was interested in the testimony of two witnesses at Monday's hearing about tampering with certain records in the Atlantic branch of the Mechanics and Traders' Bank before a visit of the State Bank Examiners. He obtained a transcript of the testimony, and will look into it.

BEEF PRICES UP AGAIN.

New High Level Reached and Wholesalers Talk of Cattle Scarcity.

The price of meat has made another sharp upward turn. It was announced yesterday that the wholesale price of ribs and loins in the best grade of beef had reached a new high level of 16½ cents a pound, an advance of 1½ cents in a week and 4½ cents since the first of the year. Rounds of beef were advanced to 11½ cents in the best grade, and 11 cents in the second grade, a rise of half a cent since last week. Chucks, too, have gone upward from one cent to one cent and a half.

The figures of wholesale prices here since the first of the year are compared as follows:

	Now.	Price Jan. 1.	Advance.
No. 1 beef—
Ribs and loins.......	.16½	.12	.04½
Rounds	.11½	.09	.02½
Chucks	.09	.08½	.00½
No. 2 beef—
Ribs and loins......	.15	.10	.05
Rounds	.11	.08½	.02½
Chucks	.08½	.07½	.01
No. 3 beef—
Ribs and loins......	.10½	.08	.02½
Rounds	.09	.07	.02
Chucks	.05	.04½	.00½

Retail butchers say that they cannot help paying the high prices wholesalers demand of them. The wholesalers, on the other hand, lay the cause of the increase in prices to scarcity of good cattle in the Southwest and West. That was their explanation of the same phenomenon last year.

BUILT BONFIRE ON TRACKS.

Boys Had Some Fun and Stopped Train and May be Arested.

A group of boys ranging from 9 to 13 years old, piled a lot of timber on one of the tracks of the North Shore Division of the Long Island Railroad about a thousand feet west of the Elmhurst Bridge yesterday morning. The timber was some of the left-over material which had been used in repairing the Elmhurst Bridge, and the boys, after heaping it on the track, clambered over the embankment and scampered away to a safe distance to await developments.

Shortly afterward the westbound Flushing Bridge Street train, which leaves Long Island City at 10:55, came along, and the engineer, catching sight of the obstruction, brought it to a stop. The planks were removed and the train continued on its way. Detectives expect to arrest some of the boys by this morning.

We Are Ready With

FALL WEIGHT BLUE SERGE SUITS

At this unusual price for the beginning of the season—$14.75

Two factors are responsible for this remarkable pre-season sale. One is the fact of the piece goods being bought months and months ago when prices were low; the other is the making up of the piece goods in the dull season when workmen are able to give more than average attention and do their work for dull-season wages.

Men accustomed to judge cloth will appreciate the quality of this 15 oz.-to-the-yard worsted serge, a fabric eminently suitable for year-round wear.

For general service, nothing can match a good, well-tailored blue serge suit. But it is necessary to be sure that the suit bought measures fully up to that standard, so many blue serge suits being either poorly made or of a fabric that wears unevenly. All our blue serges are guaranteed, whether you pay our lowest price or whether you pay our highest—on which, of course, there is the greatest saving.

THE EXTRA SESSION AND THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

The session of Congress ended yesterday will be memorable in our politics. It marked the return of the Democrats to power in the House, and not only that, it marked their return to wisdom and sanity, to sagacity in leadership and in policy. The Democrats have kept their pledges, they have kept faith with the people, presenting a record in vivid contrast with that of the Republicans in the session following the Presidential election, when in their pretended revision of the tariff they broke faith with the people. Moreover, throughout the session, from its beginning to its end, the Democrats have worked as a united and coherent party. Their councils have not been confused by divided opinion, they have not been baffled in their achievements by faction and difference. It is almost literally true, as Speaker CHAMP CLARK declared in his review of the session, that "the Democrats have made a record which has surprised our friends and dumfounded our enemies."

It will be futile for Republican partisanship to point to the paucity of the session's achievements. They may be few in number, but they are of momentous importance, and not merely in themselves, but for what they signify and portend. The reciprocity agreement with Canada has been ratified. With eleven exceptions every Democrat in the House voted for it, while more than half the House Republicans voted against it. Its passage through the Senate was made possible only by Democratic votes. With characteristic fairness and candor President TAFT frankly recognized the help the opposition had given him. The reciprocity agreement embodies Democratic policy. It is the Republican apology to the people for the Payne-Aldrich blunder. The act compelling publicity for campaign contributions, both before and after election, a measure of which the importance cannot well be overestimated, since it is not only a serious step toward the purification of our politics but one that shatters the power of the great interests to influence or control elections, must be accorded a high place among the enactments of the session. An apportionment bill, increasing the membership of the House to 433, has also been passed. The Statehood bill, admitting Arizona and New Mexico to the Union, was passed, and it is a matter for deep satisfaction that, in response to the remarkable veto message from President TAFT, it was amended in such a way as to require the people of Arizona to strike out of their Constitution the dangerous and pestilent provision for the recall of Judges by popular vote.

These four measures went to enactment. The bills revising the Wool Schedule, the Cotton, Steel, and Chemical Schedules, and the bill known as the Farmers' Free List, were passed by both houses, but encountered the Executive veto. We give Mr. TAFT full credit for sincerity in determining to withhold his approval from these bills in order that the work of revision might be more deliberately performed after the Tariff Board has made its report. The country, we feel convinced, will not accept Mr. TAFT's reasons as good and sufficient. The Democrats had promised to remove tariff taxes that enhanced the cost of living. That promise the Democrats of the House fulfilled in absolute good faith. The Republicans, too, three years ago, had promised to lower the tariff taxes, yet, when these bills came before the Republican President, bills that reduced duties no longer necessary, duties in many cases indefensible and of which the reduction or removal has been justly demanded by the people, he prevented their enactment by his veto. His signature to the bills would have gone far to take the tariff out of the campaign of 1912 as an issue between parties. The President might have obtained for his party a large share of the credit that now goes solely to the Democrats. The voters are not always mindful of fine distinctions, or even of the careful reasoning of veto messages, but the large meaning of Legislative and Executive acts does not escape them. Mr. TAFT's vetoes will very [illegible] strengthen the popular conviction that an honest downward revision [illegible] of to be had from the Republicans.

The Democrats of the House have established new customs and procedures. In two particulars they have set up precedents that, we imagine, will have sanction and following, since their merit has been abundantly proved by the result. For the first time before the beginning of their term of office the Democratic Representatives-elect met in caucus on Jan. 19, while the Republican Congress was still in session. That caucus was attended by 220 out of 227 Representatives-elect. It met for the purpose of selecting the members of the Ways and Means Committee, and that Committee was empowered to nominate for acceptance by future caucuses the members of all the Committees of the House. The consequence was that, when Congress convened in extraordinary session, the House was ready to proceed with the business before it. The caucus of Representatives-elect unanimously nominated CHAMP CLARK for Speaker, and it unanimously named OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD of Alabama as the Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. Both selections were fortunate, for Speaker CLARK has performed the duties of his office in a manner so acceptable that he has escaped criticism and won praise even from political opponents. Mr. UNDERWOOD's success has been wonderful. He has shown energy and capacity, and what was quite as important, restraint, in the special work of submitting measures of tariff reform to the House. Above and beyond that, he has exhibited the qualities of a great leader. To his wisdom and to his sound judgment, to him we think more than to any other man, is due the extraordinary transformation that has been wrought in the character, the purposes, and the standing of the Democratic Party. It is no longer a party discredited before the country, a party of unsafe, selfish, and distrusted leadership, it is a party that has regained the confidence of the people. It is a party that has put itself in a position to win and to deserve the victory in next year's election. It was Mr. UNDERWOOD's good fortune, it was the party's good fortune, that he should have drawn upon himself the abuse and the misrepresentations of Mr. BRYAN. The reply he made, perfectly destructive of the slanders uttered against him by the Nebraskan, served the purpose, which neither he nor Mr. BRYAN could have foreseen, of presenting to the country the spectacle of the elected Representatives of Democracy in the House arraying themselves solidly under the banner of the new leader and enthusiastically applauding his refutation of Mr. BRYAN's attack.

It is a record of sound and satisfactory achievements which the Democrats offer to the country as the first fruits of the power and responsibility intrusted to them. There have been no mistakes, for fortunately the resolution providing for the election of Senators by the people, which we look upon as a mistake and a folly, was buried in the Conference Committee. Thoughtless partisanship is welcome to whatever capital it can make by pointing to the small number of measures enacted in this session, but sober-minded Republicans will not fail seriously to consider the respective positions in which the parties are now placed. Their own party is divided, as the votes of the session show, and the division is serious and alarming, upon the question of the tariff just as the Democrats in Congress and in the country were divided in 1893 upon the question so resolutely pressed by President CLEVELAND of the repeal of the Silver Purchase act. Out of that Democratic division there came to the Republican Party the heritage of power they have not since relinquished except in the present House. The Democrats, on the other hand, are again a united party, united under competent and trusted leadership. Republicans may form their own conclusions as to what Republican division and Democratic unity portend.

MONA LISA.

Poor Mona Lisa, after many years of silent triumph in the Louvre, in which she has received the tributes of the whole world, has lately been subjected to perplexing misadventures. Last year the report was circulated that LEONARDO's wonderful portrait had been removed and a copy substituted in the frame. This report was never verified, and the accompanying statement that the original had been purchased by an American millionaire was surely false. The portrait was undisturbed by the rumor. La Gioconda has continued to smile mysteriously at many thousands of visitors from the wall of the Salon Carré.

To-day the whole world is astounded to hear that the portrait has been actually stolen. It is shocking to think that a thief could remove a fairly priceless painting from a famous gallery in the heart of a busy city. Beside a stolen Mona Lisa a stolen Gainsborough loses all its interest. LEONARDO DA VINCI's portrait of the Florentine lady has been the most famous portrait in the world for more than four centuries. Madonna LISA DEL GIOCONDA has lived through the centuries on his canvas. She has been an inspiration to artists of many schools, she has seemed to recognize millions of admirers, as she looked from her frame directly into the eyes of all. It is said that $5,000,000 was once offered for the picture and refused. That is a large sum of money, preposterously large for any painting, but the intrinsic value of DA VINCI's portrait is probably only less than that of the [illegible] Madonna.

CANADIAN CAMPAIGN FACETIAE.

The Attorney General of Manitoba thinks that the Dominion Premier talks "nonsense" about reciprocity, and gives an exhibition of his own sweet reasonableness by predicting that if the reciprocity arrangement should disturb the business of the United States—as nobody here thinks it will—then "the States would on one pretext or another pick a quarrel with Canada and force war on us." There has not been such an embarrassing revelation of our policy since the British journals showed that the tugs which we call training ships on the lakes give us the power to sever the Canadian communications and strike a blow at the vitals of Canada. We would not have thought of it unless we had been told. It might be thought impossible to pile an Ossa on this Pelion of a joke, but the impossible in the way of jest is accomplished by the most serious of the British newspapers and echoed in Canada. It will be conceded that mere war on Canada is a trifle to disrupting the empire. This is doubly designed by us. If reciprocity should fail, then the fell work will be accomplished by the arbitration agreement. Can it be doubted longer that these proposals are made by a country "whose hostility is manifest"?

The Opposition seem to be discovering that the country appreciates Sir WILFRID's "nonsense" better than their imaginings. With the perception that the campaign is trending against them comes an appreciation of the danger of spelling reciprocity "annexation." If annexation is the issue, and there is a majority for reciprocity, then there is danger of interpreting the majority in favor of the horrible things the Opposition are predicting. The Opposition's muckraking campaign also is in a bad way, and is formally abandoned by ROBERT BORDEN. Instead of the programme which has had such a forbidding reception, he now puts out a platform with a dozen promises of what fine things he will do if he is returned. But the more he talks about other things the more the Canadians perceive that reciprocity is worth the dozen put together. Sir WILFRID alone promises reciprocity, and there is a chance that the other good things may be thrown in by him.

There is no inconsistency between granting reciprocity and accomplishing also what Mr. BORDEN promises. Reciprocity is the issue, and was made so by the Bordenites in the most conspicuous manner in their power. Hatred of the United States, and hostility by the United States, happily neither is nor can be made the issue without arousing ribald laughter, and emphasizing the fact that the first duty of an Opposition is to oppose, and that the Canadian Opposition likes nothing less than opposing reciprocity. But the more they squirm away from their chosen task the more Sir WILFRID pins them to it. And the more he pins them to it the more they squirm away from it.

THE MISTAKE OF GOMEZ.

The situation is dangerous in any republic when the Chief Executive uses his authority to banish journalists who have severely criticised his Government. President GOMEZ of Cuba has surely made a sad mistake. Free speech and a free press are the essentials of liberty. A Government which suppresses either or both is in a way to become a despotism. Our sympathies are with the host of sober-minded business men in Cuba who have been striving to secure the stability of their republic. Their case is not nearly hopeless yet, by any means, but they must know that any government which cannot stand hostile criticism is an unfit government for a republic. The muzzling of the press in Mexico was one of the worst errors of the Diaz régime.

That the comments of the conservative newspaper called Cuba have annoyed President GOMEZ is not to the point at all. That journal has, we believe, faithfully represented the convictions of its readers who are citizens of Cuba and have rights equal to those of the stanchest adherents of the administration. The question of the legal right of the President to deport objectionable persons is of minor interest. Probably his right would be upheld by the courts. But it is a dangerous precedent. Sedition, when it can be proved, can be punished more effectually. The President of Cuba has endeavored to suppress a hostile newspaper, to muzzle public opinion.

HIGH FINANCE IN OPERA.

If only as an illustration of the magnitude of modern theatrical finance, the narrative of the adventures of an alert American impresario with the latest work of RICHARD STRAUSS is extremely interesting. This manager has lately made much money with comic opera of the familiar type, which, by the way, is a much more expensive article to deal in than grand opera ever was in the "palmy days," and his ambition impelled him to secure the right to produce in England and America the newest opera of the foremost living composer. In thus describing RICHARD STRAUSS we have no intent to detract from the large and persistent fame of PUCCINI. Even the composer of "Madama Butterfly" will admit that STRAUSS makes more noise in the world. Indeed, we do not remember another man who has equaled STRAUSS in making noise in the pursuit of art.

The impresario secured his rights and set to work to employ singers, to have scenery built and painted and costumes designed and made. The sum of money he has already invested in his contracts and purchases to this end, which he frankly states, is so greatly in excess of the total receipts of many ordinary playhouses of the better class in a whole season as to cause astonishment. We are not privileged, however, to consider the statement exaggerated, and have no disposition to do so. Modern opera was expensive before STRAUSS entered the field. Singers of rank demanded the wages of princes. Composers of note were the wards of publishers who asked huge sums for the performance of operas. But that RICHARD STRAUSS, with his increased orchestra of specialists, his new and amazing instruments, tremendous choral effects, and the physical demands he makes upon the principal performers, has doubled or trebled the cost of production seems not unlikely.

The American impresario, having embarked in this enterprise, soon found himself in troubled waters, and made for the nearest port. Seeing a prospective loss of something like half a million dollars, he has abandoned the ship. As we understand it, the American and English rights of "Der Rosenkavalier" are now purchasable. We may hope that some of the large receipts of our Metropolitan Opera House will be devoted to its production. Its orchestra of ninety-two instruments, its vast chorus, its scenic outfit can be supplied there, while the singers of that company can sing anything that is singable. "Der Rosenkavalier" is said to be light and melodious—from the Strauss point of view. But it is a great pity that high art should be so expensive.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Banishment Would Be Enough. Even the merest amateur in ornithology knows that most of the few American bird species with the habit of building many nests within narrowly restricted areas were long since exterminated, because this form of gregariousness made it so easy to kill them, and that the remainder are precariously surviving in almost inaccessible swamps and islets. The recent stories of slaughter from Montclair were puzzling, therefore, because they all told of enormous numbers of birds congregated in the thick-leafed maples along the fashionable "Crescent," with the invariable assertion or implication that they lived in those trees and that the only way to get rid of them and their matutinal chatterings was to kill them.

But none of the tree-nesting birds mentioned in the dispatches are so foolish as to make harder the gleaning of a livelihood for themselves and food for their young by forming compact colonies. Two robin nests in a single tree, for instance, are almost unknown, and it is the rule for the birds eating insects or fruit to scatter when they set up housekeeping. Even these birds, however, do gather in flocks when their annual migrations begin, and what troubled the wealth and fashion of Montclair was presumably not one continuing aggregation, but a succession of these traveling parties. For the birds with young already on the wing and independent of parental sustenance have been moving southward for several weeks, not because it is yet too cold for any of them here, but because they prefer to keep on a certain dividing line between Summer and Autumn, where is to be found most abundantly just the food that suits them best.

That birds did gather in the Montclair maples in large numbers is asserted and asseverated by a Montclairene who mildly protests against the recent denunciations of his neighbors, and he says that while he didn't and wouldn't kill any of the songsters himself, they did make o' mornings what he calls a "hellofanoise"—which word we do not find in the dictionary, but gather from the context to mean an intolerable amount and quality of sound. Perhaps, but migrants, having no ties that bind them to any particular locality, could have been rather more easily driven away than killed. Residents of the Crescent whose nerves were in such a miserable state that they could not wont themselves in a few mornings either to ignore or to enjoy a regularly recurring chorus should have employed a few cheap boys to start the migrants on their travels without hurting them.

Abe Ruef as a Reformer. That ABRAHAM RUEF, the sometime ruler and exploiter of San Francisco's vice, has intelligence and ability which, though not high, could be put to useful purposes if well directed, has never been questioned, even by those who after many days of laborious effort sent him to prison as the public enemy he certainly was, and presumably still would be if he had a chance. Possibly, however, though most improbably, since real moral imbecility is that lack of a quality or "character" which the Mendelians hold to be irremediable, he has come to realize the past waste of his capacities and is sincerely trying at this late day to use instead of abuse them.

Whether reformed or simply ennuied, it is not at all surprising that RUEF has employed his keen mind on the only interesting objects around him—his fellow-prisoners in San Quentin—and that for their benefit he has devised a scheme involving the two things with which he has had most experience—money and organization. Shrewdly deciding, as has many a more reputable reformer, that the conditions in which the ex-convict finds himself in the first days of his regained liberty are in great measure decisive as to whether he shall become an honest citizen or a habitual criminal, RUEF proposes the raising of a fund upon which for a time the released prisoner can draw as a right, not as a charity, and so get the "new start" of which he is in such desperate need.

All that the ex-boss was quoted in yesterday's dispatch as saying about this critical period is sound, though far from original, but his suggestions as to how the proposed fund should be collected lack definiteness and practicality. RUEF's implication that the ex-convict has a grievance against society because of its harshness and distrust is only half true, since society must protect itself as it is, not as it ought to be, and though its responsibility for the existence of the criminal can be demonstrated theoretically, and even scientifically, the fact remains that the risk of trusting him is great and that his return for kindness is very apt to be poor. The present obstacles in the way of his return to respectability are great, but they are not insuperable, and probably even now most of the ex-convicts whose saving is beneficial to the race save themselves with little or no help from others. That is how they prove their value.

Entomologists May Well Be Interested. Our old friends, the frog and the toad, have so long figured as alternate heroes of the alive-in-solid-rock myths that they have the best of rights to resent the appearance of a mere undifferentiated "bug" as claimant for a share of glory hitherto exclusively batrachian and quite uncontested. Frogs and toads are near relatives, and both naturally and justly they will grieve over the extension to "bugs"—for there were two of them in the dispatch from Salt Lake we printed yesterday—of that credulity, sufficiently amazing when limited to a single species, which enables a human being to believe that anything alive can survive for centuries in solid rock, foodless, waterless, airless, motionless.

Of course the frogs and toads never do or did live in solid rock, but they take the trouble to look and act rather as if they could, and by loafing around quarries and mines they provide a not too pallid excuse for ignorance and faith, in combination, to draw false conclusions from finding them in crannies and cavities, just revealed, that fit them to a nicety. But "bugs" are different. They do not make up for the part of secular seclusion, tradition does not cast them for it, and by no possibility could they play it well. Yet we read that twice within a year have officials of the Shamrock Gold Mining and Milling Company found "bugs" about a quarter of an inch long imbedded in quartzite blasted out, in one case 200 feet below the surface and in the other 100 feet.

The naive purveyor of this tale declares that "the entomologists here are much interested in this new find." Well they may be, if there are any entomologists in that neighborhood. The interest, however, will not be in the "bugs," but in the finders, who, if sincere in their belief, are extremely queer specimens and well worthy of investigation. Entomologists are not the men best qualified to conduct the investigating, but as scientists they will know how to collect data for the specialists in anthropology—or pithecanthropology.

DR. RUSBY EXPLAINS.

In Examining Importations He Never Knew Whose They Were.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reporting your telephone interview with me of last evening, you have been just a little too strong, so as to be in conflict with my testimony before the Moss Committee last Tuesday. It is true that I have never to my knowledge examined an importation of which I had previously examined a sample for private parties, yet it is not impossible that such a thing may have occurred.

The essential point is that unless I had known of the relation between the two examinations there could be no collusion. Early in my employment by the department I inquired and ascertained that an analyst employed by the Government for a few hours on, say, Monday and Friday, and paid only for such hours of service, was entirely free to perform work for private parties on the other five days of the week, provided, of course, that there was nothing improper and nothing prejudicial to the interests of the department. Any other view would have been an absurdity. In spite of this fact, however, I decided that I would not make use of the privilege, and, as you have stated, it was my custom to refuse such work. In some cases, and for special reasons, I accepted it.

If an importer was in doubt about the acceptability of a drug, and sent it to me for an opinion, I would inform him that it was not genuine or of good quality. In such cases I consulted with the Chief of the Laboratory in New York, who thought that, aside from the loss to the importer which was prevented, it was in the interest of the department to prevent a possible case of friction from the subsequent rejection of the shipment.

For a time I filed written memoranda at the close of the month of any such case which had occurred during that month, but the cases were so rare, many months elapsing at a time without one, that I did not keep up the practice. It was not necessary to employ detectives to seek out these cases, for I would cheerfully have furnished a complete list of them, including those already on file with the department. In nearly all cases, it would follow that, if an importer suspected the genuineness of a drug, that drug would be objectionable. If it were not, I would naturally have to tell him so. So far as I can remember, there never was but one such case. I do not remember whose it was or the article in question, and think it very unlikely that I ever reported on it afterward.

It must be remembered that in examining importations I never know whose they are, unless for some special reason my attention is directed to it by others in the laboratory, and this fact renders it impossible that any impropriety could have been involved. This seems to be a case of using a microscope to search for a speck of dust in the highway.

My account since Oct. 9, 1909, all that is before me at the moment, shows total receipts for such work of $17.74.

Price of Being Discovered.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is it possible that the City of New York is going to squander $100,000 of the taxpayers' money on a Columbus Day celebration? That's what the paper said this morning. What tribute to the politicians who are ever looking for ways to spend the people's money—never for a way to save it! Is there no way to prevent such a carnival of waste? And all the time the taxes keep a-climbing. It's so easy to spend somebody else's money! As a taxpayer, getting soaked more and more every year, I hope the reputable newspapers, Mayor Gaynor, and any one else with authority and influence, will get together in time to prune this expenditure.

New York, Aug. 21, 1911.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I should like to ask why the city should be called upon to appropriate $100,000 for the celebration of Columbus Day. While it may be for a worthy object, I understand individuals and societies celebrate and at their own expense. Why not ask for $100,000 to celebrate the discovery of such people as Croker, and Tweed, and Devery, and Murphy, and others.

Would not this $100,000 be much better invested by restoring the parks to their original beautiful condition? Or fixing some of the bad streets? Or by applying it to a thousand needy conditions of the city?

As a taxpayer I wonder what comes next.

Praise for Secretary MacVeagh.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is to be hoped that the press will show full appreciation of the quiet, steady, searching work that has been performed by Secretary MacVeagh in exposing the deep-laid plots and frauds practiced upon the Government. The work is all the more creditable because it has been performed as quietly as could be, but carried forward persistently and relentlessly. Some little has been laid bare of the discouragements and opposition that Secretary MacVeagh has met with at every turn, but with the full co-operation and support of the President he has persisted and doubtless will persist in carrying out his views and seeing to it that the laws are fully and faithfully executed. It is heartening and inspiring to a public official to feel that his exertions are properly appreciated and receive the approbation of those whose good opinion he courts.

It is to be hoped that the press will not be niggardly in its praise, whatever private interests may assail.

BOSTON MEN FIND MODEL CITY

Chamber of Commerce Members Full of Praise of Frankfort-on-Main.

Fifty members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce arrived here yesterday by the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse from Europe, where they have been making a tour of twenty-five of the principal cities. James McKibben, Secretary of the chamber, said that the party left New York on the Carmania on June 17, when they numbered 100, the remainder having stayed behind in Europe or come over ahead on account of business. To a TIMES reporter Mr. McKibben said:

"The city which impressed us most on the tour was Frankfort-on-Main, where the prominent business men give their time to municipal affairs, and graft is unknown. You know how things are done here. The suburbs of Frankfort are developed, and laid out by the Welfare Committee for the benefit of the community, and not for the real estate operators. We were splendidly received everywhere, and most lavishly entertained."

Owing to a case of sickness in the steerage the liner was detained nearly three hours in Quarantine, and did not arrive at her pier in Hoboken until nearly 1 o'clock. The Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse came over the short course from Cherbourg, 3,046 miles, at an average speed of 22.07 knots an hour.

STICKS TO $1 GAS RATE.

Gravesend Bay District's Application for a Reduction is Denied.

Residents of the Gravesend Bay district, the 31st Ward of Brooklyn, must for the present pay $1 for the gas they receive from the Brooklyn Borough Gas Company. Complaints from 100 consumers were received on Oct. 14 last by the Public Service Commission, asserting that the $1.05 then charged them was excessive. An investigation was held by Commissioner Maltbie in which the company volunteered to leave the question of a proper rate entirely in the hands of the Commission and the rate was reduced to $1 at the beginning of the present year.

Commissioner Maltbie took up the figures of the most profitable year of the company and also went into the cost of operation. He came to the conclusion that the company was working with fair efficiency and economy and that the profit to be derived in 1911 from $1 a thousand would be about the equivalent of the profit in 1910 from $1.05 a thousand. After reviewing the value of the real estate of the company and pointing out the sparsely populated character of the community in which it operates, he has come to the conclusion that the complaint must be dismissed, although there is a possibility that in the near future the improved conditions will warrant a reduction in rates.

JACK TARS GET 'DITTY BAGS.'

W. C. T. U. Members Fit Out Crew of Kansas with Needles, Thread, and Darning Yarn.

During the stay of the battleship Kansas in this harbor, where she anchored on Sunday afternoon off Tompkinsville, the officers and crew have each been presented with a "comfort" bag specially made for them by the women of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of the United States. The bags contain needles, thread, cotton and darning needles with woolen yarn, and have been known for generations on board ship as "ditty bags."

Mrs. Ella Thatcher, Superintendent of the Soldiers and Sailors' Division of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of the United States, went on board with five women members from Staten Island and made the presentation. As the women were leaving the ship the band played "America," and Mrs. Thatcher offered a prayer, and thanked the Captain and his officers for their reception.

Fire Auto School Opens.

Fire Commissioner Johnson and Chief Kenlon opened the new school for chauffeurs in the Fire Department yesterday. The school was opened for the instruction of about five hundred chauffeurs necessary within a year to drive the automobile apparatus with which the department is being equipped. The school is in charge of Capt. James J. Henry, supervising engineer of the repair shops at Fifty-sixth Street and Tenth Avenue, where the school will be held.

Minister John B. Jackson Arrives.

Among the passengers arriving yesterday on the Ward liner Saratoga from Havana was John B. Jackson, the United States Minister to Cuba, who left later for Washington, where he will remain a few days.

A Future for Montclair.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

What is the matter with Montclair? Or, rather, what is the matter with those who seem to be shaping the destinies of Montclair? First, a move to make the town dogless. Now, a measure to render it birdless. What next—babyless? For, as the motive seems to be to war on such agencies as "murder sleep," and as babies are not uncommonly classed as "sleep destroyers," why not away with the offending infants, as with the dogs and birds?

What will Montclair in time become, if not a city of the dead? Will it resolve itself into a community of whispering old maids and bachelors?

New York, Aug. 21, 1911.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a former resident of Montclair, N. J., I wish to protest, through your columns, against the massacre of birds recently committed in that town. I much appreciated your editorial article, and agree with you in hoping that the better class of citizens will take up the matter at once and make it impossible for such an outrage to happen again.

WITNESSES OF THE SPIRIT.

Up they creep, through slime of cities,
Sprung of Pain,
Blossoming, as Summer flowers
Thrive in rain.

Out of evil, sorrow, earth-pangs
Moulding fate;
Pure, serene, secure, inspiring,
Brave, elate!

What heed they of cringing cowards
Crying "Peace!"
Theirs to fight till Life, their Captain,
Grant release.

Theirs to conquer by forgetting Yesterdays!
Theirs to strive for Truth and Honor,
Not for praise!

Swing of world or wing of insect—
Each his work!
Only scorn for those who, knowing,
Yet would shirk.

Not the son of splendid leisure,
Born in ease,
Counts the most for human Progress;
Pain, Disease,

Want and Sorrow, grim, gaunt-featured,
Ofttimes play
Mighty parts in man's equipment
For the fray!

Up they swarm, the great world-builders,
Tested, true;
Theirs to labor—and to conquer—
And to view

ADMITS SOME FLAWS IN DOTY'S METHODS

Dr. Brannan, Defender of the Health Officer, Unable to Defend All Quarantine Work.

WHEN CHOLERA CASES GOT IN

It Was Not a Sign of Efficient Administration, but Not Necessarily a Sign of Inefficiency, He Says.

The responsibility of Dr. Alvah H. Doty, Health Officer of the Port, for the passing through Quarantine lines of the recent cholera cases discovered in this city and Auburn, N. Y., was inquired into at the hearing of the Quarantine Investigating Commission at the County Court House yesterday afternoon. Under persistent questioning by the attorney for the complainants, Dr. John Winters Brannan, President of the Board of Trustees of Bellevue and Allied Hospitals, who has been one of the leading defenders of Dr. Doty, was made to admit that if the reported cases as described to him by Charles Dushkind, the lawyer for the complainants, were true, he would consider the Quarantine administration at Hoffman Island "not efficient." Later, despite gruelling questions put to him by Mr. Dushkind as well as by Commissioner Bulger, he qualified his answer by saying that he would, nevertheless, not call the administration "inefficient." He also refused to say he considered it dangerous to let the employed watchers of cholera suspects pass freely through the quarantine lines into the midst of their families and the rest of the city's population as in the case of the watchman, Cushing, who died of the disease on Staten Island four days after his discharge from Hoffman Island. Dr. Brannan, nevertheless, said he considered those quarantine precautions necessary in the case of arriving immigrants.

When Dr. Brannan was recalled to the stand at 2 o'clock he admitted having heard about Watchman Cushing, who, four days after his discharge from Hoffman Island, where he had been employed to watch cholera suspects had collapsed with cholera at his home on Staten Island. Dr. Brannan said he had merely read about the case, and did not recall the dates.

"Collapsing with the disease as he did four days after his employment as watcher over cholera suspects on the island," asked Dushkind, "where would you say he must have become infected with the cholera germ?"

"Probably where he was employed," replied Dr. Brannan.

"Wouldn't that change your mind as to the advisability of letting cholera suspects go ashore?"

"Not at all. There were no secondary cases," answered Dr. Brannan.

"Do you mean to say there was no possibility of Cushing's infecting other people?" asked Mr. Dushkind.

"The facts seem to show there was at least no probability," replied the witness. "I should say the chances were against it."

"If there was little chance of any one's becoming infected through Cushing," asked Dushkind, "why do we take steps toward quarantining at all?"

"I suppose we don't want to take any chances," answered Dr. Brannan.

"Yet, Cushing's family being laymen, was it not probable that through natural carelessness they might have become infected through water or food contaminated by him?"

"Possible, but not probable," replied the witness. "In twenty years' experience I have not seen it."

"But flies and insects transmit the germ to food?" asked Dushkind.

"They may," replied Dr. Brannan, "but I don't think that is the general way."

"Now, doctor, tell me on your medical reputation whether you would permit the Cushing family, who were in personal contact with cholera, to go unquarantined," asked Mr. Dushkind.

"I should keep them under observation," admitted Dr. Brannan.

"But would you admit a man employed as watchman over cholera suspects to go freely on land and mingle with the rest of the population?"

"I would."

Mr. Dushkind then read from Dr. Doty's book on the prevention of infectious diseases passages showing that such diseases can be transmitted through the clothing of nurses, through suspects exposed to the infection, and through members of the families visiting suspects surreptitiously. Dr. Brannan persisted in holding that a watchman over suspects might be allowed to go freely about his business. In the case of immigrants, on the other hand, he said, there was a difference, in that they had been exposed more to the disease, were new to the country, and had no work.

"Don't you know as a matter of fact," pursued Mr. Dushkind, "that since the Cushing case was made public Dr. Doty has quarantined his employes, and that the Cushing family and the family next door to them have also been quarantined?"

"I don't know it," answered Dr. Brannan, "but I should not be surprised."

Mr. Dushkind then came to the discovery of cholera cases in this city among passengers of the steamer Abruzzi in June, and put this question:

"Supposing the steamer came here from a cholera port on June 20, having had two passengers dead of the disease at sea; that a third passenger died as the ship arrived in port here; and that a fourth died of cholera while being transferred from the boat to Swinburne Island; that all the passengers were detained for observation and another case developed on the third day; that all the steerage passengers were discharged on the fourth day from this last exposure, and after this two more cases of cholera were discovered among passengers from the same vessel—one in Auburn and the other in Brooklyn—would you or would you not say that this is a manifestation of an efficient administration?"

Mr. Battle, for the defense, objected, but Commissioner Bulger thought the question proper.

"I should say it was not a manifestation of efficient administration," finally answered Dr. Brannan.

"Of what, then, was it a manifestation?" insisted the Commissioner.

"Well, I won't say it was a manifestation of an inefficient administration," declared Dr. Brannan.

"I cannot see how there can be a middle ground between efficiency and inefficiency," insisted Commissioner Bulger. "Either it must be efficient or inefficient."

Concerning a woman who was stricken with cholera on Hoffman Island on July 12, though she had been brought here on the steamer Campatria on June 5, more than a month before, Dr. Brannan said Dr. Doty had told him on Monday that the woman was infected through one of her children, a cholera carrier, at the hospital.

"Did Dr. Doty, who told you all this, tell you why he never reported this case to the Federal authorities?" cried Mr. Dushkind.

"I don't know whether he did or did not report it," replied the witness.

"The child, as a matter of fact, had measles," said Mr. Dushkind.

He then wanted to know whether Dr. Brannan considered it inefficient administration that allowing the steerage passengers of the steamer Laura to be discharged at Ellis Island two days after the removal of two cholera suspects from her to Swinburne Island on her arrival June 21, and then two days afterward to recall the steamer to quarantine. After much wrangling Dr. Brannan admitted:

"It would not be considered an efficient quarantine administration. But," he added, "I don't think your assumptions are true."

Mr. Dushkind then asked for an adjournment, saying, as indeed he looked, that he was tired out.

"Are you tired?" smiled Dr. Brannan pleasantly. The hearing will continue at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

MAY FIND BIGAMY IN DREIER MARRIAGE

District Attorney Clarke Starts Inquiry Into Trumbull-Smith's Matrimonial Record.

SWORE HE WASN'T WED

Affidavit on Which He Got License in Brooklyn May Form Basis of Prosecution—Miss Dreier's Family Silent.

District Attorney John F. Clarke of Kings County ordered an investigation yesterday of the circumstances surrounding the marriage on Aug. 8 last of Miss Katherine Sophie Dreier of Brooklyn and Edward Trumbull-Smith, the artist, of Connecticut and London. That marriage, according to an authorized statement issued on behalf of the Dreier family last Monday, is null and void, for the reason that Mr. Trumbull-Smith, who is professionally known as Trumbull, had a wife in England from whom he was not legally free when he married Miss Dreier. Mr. Clarke learned the particulars in the case from the newspapers yesterday morning, and assigned Assistant District Attorney Leroy W. Ross to investigate.

Mr. Ross sent to the City Clerk's office for the official copy of the application for for the marriage license issued to Mr. Trumbull-Smith and Miss Dreier on the day they were married.

In the application the prospective groom gave his name as Edward Trumbull-Smith, and deposed to the best of his knowledge and belief that no legal impediment existed as to his right to enter into the marriage state. In answer to the questions required by law he gave his residence as 33 Main Street, Stonington, Conn. He said that he was born in Forester, Mich. In answer to the question, "number of marriages," he answered, "first;" to the question, "former wife or wives, living or dead," his answer was "none," and he answered "no" to the question, "is applicant a divorced person?" Mr. Trumbull-Smith gave his age as 27, while Miss Dreier in her application gave hers as 33 years. Both gave "artist" as their occupation.

If Mr. Trumbull-Smith had and still has a wife in England the affidavit he made when the license was issued indicates one reason why District Attorney Clarke has determined on a sweeping investigation. At the District Attorney's office it was said that Mr. Clarke had requested that some member of the Dreier family call on him at 10 o'clock this morning for the purpose of giving him all the information the family may have in regard to Trumbull-Smith. George D. Beattys of 49 Wall Street, the Dreier lawyer, has also been invited to a conference with the Kings County District Attorney some time to-day. It was understood that Mr. Beattys would comply with the request, but it could not be learned whether any member of the Dreier family had accepted the invitation up to the time Mr. Clarke's office closed yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Clarke, it was stated, will not wait for any complaint to be made by any member of the Dreier family or their attorney, but if any evidence is found to indicate that the law has been violated the County Prosecutor will act of his own initiative. It was not denied that if it is proved that Trumbull-Smith has a wife in England she will be brought to Brooklyn if her aid is needed to complete any action the State may institute against Trumbull-Smith.

While Mr. Clarke was getting his investigation under way District Attorney Whitman of New York County also took occasion to look into the case, and City Clerk Scully at his request sent a messenger to Brooklyn to get a copy of the marriage license. Mr. Whitman afterward said that he found out that the case was not in his, but in Mr. Clarke's, jurisdiction.

H. Edward Dreier, the brother of Miss Dreier, was not at his home, 6 Montague Terrace, when a TIMES reporter called there last night. In fact, there was no one there except a servant, who said that every member of the family was out of town. Miss Dreier's secretary, who talked with THE TIMES reporter there on Monday night, was also out of town, the servant said.

Mr. Beattys, the lawyer, did not issue any additional statement yesterday. Mr. Beattys says he does not know where Trumbull-Smith is at present. It was rumored, however, that he is at his mother's home, in Detroit, Mich., where, according to the report, he is not at home to any callers. The only information had concerning the whereabouts of Miss Dreier was that she was out of town.

WOULDN'T REMARRY HIM.

Miss Dreier's Sister Says Romance Is Over, Though He Might Be Freed.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—Mrs. Raymond Robins, President of the Women's Trade League of this city, is authority for the statement that Edward Trumbull-Smith, who married her sister, Katherine S. Dreier of Brooklyn, though he had a wife living in London, will not be prosecuted.

"My sister was married to Mr. Trumbull Aug. 8," Mrs. Robins said to-day, "but at that time no one of our family knew that Mr. Trumbull was married and had a wife and children in London. My husband, Raymond Robins, performed the ceremony when the illness of Mr. Trumbull's mother hastened the marriage and caused an advance of a day in the plans. Mr. Robins is ordained as a Congregational minister.

"It was upon her arrival at the Trumbull home in Detroit that my sister first learned of Mr. Trumbull's other marriage. She was shocked to learn that there had been no divorce, and returned immediately to the home of our parents in New York. Steps will be taken immediately to have the marriage annulled.

"I was in New York when my sister returned from Detroit, and she told me she never would remarry Mr. Trumbull. I have no doubt that he thought he was in the right in thinking his previous marriage had been set aside."

From Mrs. Robins it was learned that Miss Dreier in November of last year was among the most active suffragettes who participated in the series of attacks upon Parliament and the British Cabinet in London.

HIS WIFE AN ARTIST'S MODEL.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 22.—Edward Trumbull-Smith, the artist, who married Miss Katherine Dreier of Brooklyn two weeks ago and yesterday was charged by her with bigamy, is believed to be still in Detroit in seclusion at the home of his mother, Mrs. John T. Faxon. Repeated calls at the residence failed to disclose him or his mother. Mr. Faxon, his stepfather, who is head bookkeeper at the Wayne Hotel, receives all inquiries pleasantly, but says firmly that there is nothing whatever to be said regarding the case.

Friends of the Faxons are not so reticent, and, though they do not know much about the case, they have told enough to give an inkling of the artist's romance. He went to Europe half a dozen years ago to study. In London he met and married a young woman, said to be an artist's model. He kept the marriage a secret even from his mother. She learned of it only last Fall through a letter he received from his wife while on a visit here, and which he carelessly left where she found it.

She did not inform him, however, that she knew his secret. She did mention it to neighbors. Her son went to New York. When she was informed a day or two prior to her son's marriage to Miss Dreier of the coming nuptials she wired him that she was seriously ill. It is believed by her friends that this was done to prevent the marriage or to postpone it until she could talk with him regarding his other wife. But, instead of postponing the marriage, the ruse only forced it ahead a day. Then Trumbull-Smith hastened to Detroit, and it is believed he has been here since.

There is serious doubt, however, that the mother is ill. When the tidings of the proposed annulment of the marriage reached Detroit last night a telephone call to the house was promptly answered. But when, half an hour later, a correspondent called at the house it was dark and locked.

COL. ASTOR HERE AGAIN.

Returns with Miss Force from Cruise—Dine at Long Beach.

The steam yacht Noma, with Col. John Jacob Astor, his fiancée, Miss Madeleine T. Force, and her father, William H. Force, aboard, returned yesterday afternoon from a five days' cruise, and anchored off the New York Yacht Club's station, at the foot of East Twenty-third Street.

The party went immediately from the landing to the Force residence, at 18 East Thirty-seventh Street, where Mrs. Force and her elder daughter, Miss Katherine Force, were awaiting them. Last evening Col. Astor motored out to Long Beach with his fiancée and her mother and dined at the Hotel Nassau, returning later in the evening.

The arrival of Col. Astor and his fiancée at the hotel caused quite a flutter among the guests, as it was unexpected. Miss Force seemed in splendid spirits, and had a healthy tan on her face, and seemed much improved in health after the cruise, which was taken mainly for her benefit. Others dining at the hotel, some of whom were entertaining parties, were Mrs. William G. Roelker, H. Walter Webb, Baron Oppenheim, Baron Schlippenbach, and Baron Austen.

As soon as Col. Astor arrived in town yesterday he was met with a bombardment of inquiries regarding the date of his coming marriage, and even while the party was fishing and bathing in Peconic Bay, it is said, he did not escape from the same question.

But he was unwilling to make any comment on his approaching marriage. Instead he said they had all had a splendid trip, and had spent most of their time after entering Peconic Bay bathing and fishing.

Miss Sterger Weds Robert Eiserman.

The wedding of Miss Dorothy M. Sterger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Sterger, to Robert Eiserman, took place yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, 514 East 168th Street. Mr. Eiserman is private secretary to Robert H. McCurdy, banker, of 24 Nassau Street.

The wedding was a quiet one, only relatives and intimate friends being present. Thomas E. Moe of 164 West Ninety-sixth Street was best man.

Later the couple left for Maine on their bridal trip. They will reside in this city after Oct. 1. Mr. Eiserman has been living at Elmhurst, L. I.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 22.—Miss Eleanora R. Sears of Boston, who is spending the Summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Vanderbilt returned from Manchester last evening from a visit with Miss Sears, which is the second visit he has paid to Manchester within a short time. EDDIE FOY AGAIN CHANGES MANAGERS

A. H. Woods Sells "Pet of the Petticoats" to C. B. Dillingham and F. Ziegfeld, Jr.

STAR ISN'T AT REHEARSALS

Objected to Some of the Songs Given to Harry Fox—Foy Musical Show at Globe Next Month.

Eddie (Edward Fitzgerald) Foy, has changed his managers in the middle of the stream, or at the beginning of the theatrical season. Last year, and for several years before Mr. Foy had been under the direction of the Shuberts. Last Spring it was announced that he would appear under the management of A. H. Woods in a musical play called "The Pet of the Petticoats." It was to be a play of the type that he could do best, and in the company were to be Harry Fox and the Millership sisters, recruited from vaudeville.

Rehearsals began and went on, and last week it became known on Broadway that things were not going smoothly. People who had seen some of the rehearsals said that Mr. Foy objected to some of the songs given to Harry Fox, because, it was reported, he thought them quite good enough for the star. Toward the last of the week it became known that the comedian and his manager had disagreed to the extent that they had separated and Mr. Fox was to be made the star.

Late last night, however, came the news of the change of plans. Charles Dillingham and F. Ziegfeld, Jr., according to the statement from the Dillingham office, had combined to buy from A. H. Woods the rights to "The Pet of the Petticoats" and Mr. Foy. The production, including scenery and costumes and weeks of rehearsals, was complete, and was purchased with the play and the star. Mr. Dillingham and Mr. Ziegfeld met Mr. Woods on Broadway yesterday morning. They discussed the situation, and Mr. Ziegfeld proposed the combination between himself and Mr. Dillingham. It was accepted, the arrangements were made, and Mr. Foy was notified by telephone at his home in New Rochelle.

Mr. Dillingham's announcement last night stated that "The Pet of the Petticoats" and Mr. Foy would be seen at the Globe Theatre early in September. The last week—the present week—is advertised as the last of Valeska Suratt in "The Red Rose," and it was expected that John Barrymore and Thomas Wise in a new comedy would be the successor. The announcement came so late last night that it was impossible to find any of the Dillingham forces to find out whether the musical play would take the place of the comedy.

A dispatch from Asbury Park, where the musical piece was scheduled to open Friday night, was received last night. It said that the advance agent of the Foy show had told of a disagreement between Eddie Foy and the management, and that Harry Fox would be the star. Mr. Fox and his two girl associates have been a part of the Cabaret show at the Folies Bergere this week.

EVANSTON THEATRE'S RULE.

Certain Words Barred on Stage of Chicago Suburb's New Playhouse.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—Evanston, the fashionable north shore suburb, which boasts of a population of 25,000, opened its first theatre last night. The theatre, which was erected at a cost of $70,000, is owned by a stock company of Evanstonians. A large portion of the people attend church on Sunday, according to the records of the various houses of worship in Evanston, so there will be no performance on that day. Certain words are never to be used on the stage which are used freely on other stages, and are generally considered to be never-failing laugh producers.

The house will be given over to vaudeville for the present. A section of the gallery, with a private entrance, has been reserved for negroes.

Juvenile "Pinafore" to be Repeated.

The Stage Children's Fund has arranged for a repetition of its juvenile "Pinafore" performance to be given at the Casino Theatre on the afternoon of Friday, Sept. 15. The cast of the performance of June 28 has been re-engaged and the chorus, it is expected, will be considerably enlarged. The scenery and costumes will be the same. The Shuberts have donated the theatre, and the entire receipts of the performance will be devoted to the fund.

HERE FOR FUNERAL OF JOHN W. GATES

Many Men of Prominence in Business World Will Gather at Last Rites To-day.

PREPARATIONS AT PLAZA

Financier's Son Touchingly Characterizes His Relations with Him—Service at Port Arthur.

John W. Gates's body was brought back from France yesterday on the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, and the funeral services will be held at the Hotel Plaza at 10 A. M. to-day.

On board the liner were Mrs. Gates, her son, Charles G. Gates, and his fiancée, Miss Florence Hopwood, her mother, Mrs. F. W. Hopwood, and H. S. Black, President of the United States Realty Company. They were met at Quarantine by Herbert L. Jones, a former associate of Mr. Gates, who went down the Bay in the revenue cutter. Acting under instructions of Collector Loeb there was very little delay on the part of the Customs officials at the pier, and the body was placed in a casket and taken away by an undertaker fifteen minutes after the ship docked.

Of the death of his father, which he seemed to feel very deeply, Charles G. Gates said:

"You cannot understand it. He was not only my father, but he was my pal. He made the bravest fight in the world against death. When they gave him stimulants he stood up and said, 'I will not go!' but it was God's will, and he is gone."

When asked about the report of his engagement to Miss Hopwood, Mr. Gates replied:

"Yes, you may state it as a fact. I am only sorry that the announcement was made in the West just at the time of my father's death. It caused much inconvenience on that account."

The assembly room at the Plaza, where the service is to be held, has been draped in purple and decorated with palms. Seven hundred chairs have been placed in the room to accommodate the relatives and friends invited to attend.

The casket was placed late yesterday afternoon at the south end in front of a black frame extending 45 feet across the room and reaching to the ceiling, upon which a number of orchids, roses, lilies, and other floral decorations were suspended. A second heavily draped frame surrounding the casket is covered with wreaths sent by friends of the deceased from all parts of the country.

The service will be conducted by the Rev. Wallace MacMullen of the Madison Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, assisted by the Rev. J. La Grone of Port Arthur, Texas, and the choral and instrumental programme will be under the direction of Nahan Franko, formerly leader of the Metropolitan Opera House Orchestra. The three hymns to be sung by the choir are "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "Abide With Me," and "Rock of Ages." Mme. Dumas is the soprano.

Relatives and friends who have come from distant points to be present at the service are Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Baker and Henry R. Baker of St. Charles, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Angell and Dr. F. H. Blackman of Chicago, and Sherburne W. Gates, an uncle of the deceased, of Durand, Mich, and his son, William R. Gates, and his daughter, Mrs. [illegible] G. Shane; D. O. Latimer and R. S. Hammond of Winnipeg.

The honorary pallbearers are J. S. Cullinan, Arnold Schlaet, L. H. Lapham, W. B. Sharp, Alfred Clifford, John Lambert, John A. Drake, Alvin W. Krech, C. G. Smith, O. C. Wells, W. C. Hogg, R. H. Gates is taking place in New York to-morrow memorial services will be held in Port Arthur, the Elks lodge, the city administration, the Catholic and Protestant churches, more than 1,000 employes of the Texas Company, 5,000 to 6,000 citizens of Port Arthur, and several thousand from Beaumont, Houston, Orange, Galveston, and other Texas cities taking part in them. When Larry Doyle jarred the ball on the cheek in the ninth inning at the Polo Grounds yesterday and sent "Red" Murray sprinting across the plate with the run which beat the Cubs, the Giants vaulted triumphantly into first place in the National League race, and, over your coffee and rolls this morning, you'll notice them setting the pace with a lead of five points in the exhilarating strife for the strip of silk bunting which, in the baseball world, has more value than all the sparklers that were ever shoveled out of the Kimberley mines.

The Giants victory came by a score of 6 to 5 in a whirlwind rush which carried them flying past the dumbfounded Cubs. In the eighth inning the Giant bats stripped all the mystery from the curves of three-fingered Brown, the master flinger of the Cub collection, and poked in three runs which tied the score. Striking while the iron was hot and before Chicago had recovered from the effects of the staggering blow, New York, with one gone in the final chapter, came through a winner, while 20,000 people danced and yelled in a delirium of joy.

If ever a man, single handed, shattered the nerve of a pitcher, it was little Josh Devore yesterday. Five times he wandered to the bat and five times a hit splashed off his bat. He was a painful thorn in Mordecai Brown's side. His continual hacking at the coal miner's best curves finally took the starch out of the big-gun Cub and Devore's teammates finished the job.

Larry Doyle was back in the game after a few days lay off with a lame back. The scrappy aggressive Giant captain cavorted around second base with all the liveliness of a heavily charged electric wire and instilled a lot of ginger into the team. And when the timely swat was needed in the moment of dire need, Laughing Larry executed the cracking hit, the echo of which resounded from one end of the league to the other.

Both teams played the kind of ball you'd expect from champions. The play at times was lightning fast and the fielding was so smooth that it was as bright as newly polished nickel-plate. There was more dash and spirit to the Giants' game and their skillful defensive playing cut the Cub advance down with deadly effect.

Leon Ames started the game for the Giants and heavy whalers like Schulte, Hofman, and Archer pummeled his curves frantically. There was no hard luck or jinx to further his downfall for when the Cubs hit him the ball dented the fence. Manager McGraw saw him tottering in the fifth inning when he walked the first two men. Crandall, the lifesaver, pitching his second game in four days, went to the mound and halted the free-for-all exercise of the Cub walking club. He held the Cubs safe after crawling out of the deep hole which was set for him.

While Ames was in the box, he did some smart fielding and scooped up everything in his vicinity. He threw Sheckard out at first for a starter and then "Wildfire" Schulte attempted to add another homer to his long list. The ball sailed over the head of Snodgrass in centre field and the Cub landed at third. Ames uncorked a wild pitch which dug a hole in front of the plate and Meyers couldn't find the ball, Schulte scored. Devore waved at the first ball Brown pitched in the same inning and tumbled it into left field. The next three Giants died without a whimper. Jimmy Doyle skied to Devore in the second and Hofman drove a steaming drive to right field which Becker cut down to a double by fast fielding. Saler banged a hot grounder at Ames and was thrown out at first. Jimmy Archer hit savagely to right for three bases and Hofman counted.

Brown was determined to play a prominent part in the Giants' destruction, so he jammed a single to left, scoring Archer. Meyers and Ames succumbed easily on rockets in the third inning, but when Devore sallied forth he brought a bright gleam of hope. He scorched the lawn and beat out Joe Tinker's throw. Doyle singled to left, sending Josh to second. Snodgrass, with fire in his eyes, hammered a long flier to left field which came within six inches of going into the bleachers. The ball carromed out of Sheckard's reach, and Snodgrass ran around to third, Devore and Doyle scoring. Becker fanned and ended the round.

Ames showed signs of cracking in the fifth inning. Brown walked, and so did Sheckard. McGraw yanked Ames out and sent Crandall in. Schulte grounded to Fletcher, who made a high toss to Herzog to force Brown at third. Herzog couldn't reach the ball and the bases were crowded. The situation called for a cracked-ice disposition, and Crandall proved to be the Eskimo. Tinker rolled to Fletcher, who threw to Meyers, retiring Brown at the plate. The bases were still as populated as could be. Zimmerman swung madly at two shoots and was overwhelmingly fooled.

But not on the third one, Horace, for he picked it on the chest and it whistled its way to left, scoring Sheckard and Schulte. J. Doyle rolled to Ames, who tossed Tinker out at third. Hofman grounded to Fletcher and J. Doyle was put out at second by his namesake, Lawrence.

Saier bunted in the sixth inning and was safe. Archer laid down an infield tap, which Merkle devoured hungrily, and by a beautiful throw got Saier at second. In the seventh inning, with one out, Tinker walked, getting Crandall's only pass. Zimmerman dashed the ball at L. Doyle, who made a great stop, touched second, killing Tinker, and doubled Zimmerman at first.

Devore made his third hit in the fifth inning, bouncing a white-hot grasser off Jimmy Doyle's boots. Josh opened the eighth with a fourth ringing smash to centre field. Larry Doyle walked. Snodgrass hammered a double to the left field fence, scoring Devore, and pushing Larry to third. He scored while Becker was being thrown out at first, but Snodgrass was tied to second and didn't move. Merkle drove a single to left and Snodgrass started home. Coming into third Jimmy Doyle ran in front of him and almost bowled the runner over. McGraw set up a loud protest, which would have been recognized, but it wasn't necessary, for Sheckard's throw-in was missed by Jimmy Doyle, and Snodgrass scored anyway. Doyle was hissed and hooted for getting in Snodgrass's way. The score was tied and everybody seemed unusually happy.

Meyers, the first batsman up in the ninth, had to duck Brown's wild benders and got a ticket. "Red" Murray was put on to do the sprinting for the big redskin. Crandall spilled a spunky little sacrifice in front of the plate. Who waltzes up again but Devore. Sure enough, he rattled off his fifth hit, a ripping smash to left, which put Murray on third. Doyle's hit to right followed, and Murray scampered home with the victory.

CONQUERING AN OLD FOE.

It's breezy and invigorating on Pennant Heights, and if the Giants like it maybe they'll stay there.

A telegram was sent to the Polo Grounds yesterday for the Marquis of Queensberry. The boy who delivered the wire had only heard of one Marquis near Coogan's Bluff, so he gave it to Rube Marquard. Such is fame.

With the Celtic persuasion of Larry Doyle back on the job, these are busy times for the Chicago Dutch.

Charley Murphy, President of the Cubs, grinned in the first inning, smiled in the second, laughed out loud in the fifth, but in the eighth and ninth innings he looked like a man suffering from dyspepsia.

Somebody asked Mordecai Brown last night if he knew Josh Devore who plays left field for the Giants. If it hadn't been for kind friends interfering, the man who asked the question would now be in the hospital.

Snodgrass stands aces high with the gentry in the quarter bleachers in centre field. After he drove in two runs yesterday one bow and a tip of his cap wouldn't do. He had to respond three times to the ovation.

By the way, the big world's championship pennant of 1905 on the pole in centre field was badly ripped by the last storm. It seems about the proper time for a new one.

Say, do you know that if you could get hold of all the sheckels they are raking in at the Polo Grounds these days, you could have a sea-going yacht, a palace at Newport, racing cars, London clothes, and more friends than you could count?

While the medals for life savers are being distributed, don't overlook Crandall.

Phillies Shut Out Pirates.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22.—Pittsburgh was shut out here to-day by 3 to 0. All of the home team's runs were made off Ferry's delivery in the first two innings, Philadelphia bunching three hits with two bases on balls and an error. Wilson, with four singles, starred at the bat, while a wonderful one hand catch and throw by Beck, on which a double play was made, featured the fielding. Score:

WHEAT'S FIELDING SAVES BROOKLYN

Four Sensational Catches and Brilliant Throw Home Defeat St. Louis Team.

Dolly Stark, holding down the position of pinch hitter in place of Schardt with two out in the last half of the tenth inning, batted the Superbas to victory over the Cardinals at Washington Park yesterday afternoon, 6 to 5. The deciding slam arrived at just 6:35 o'clock and darkness had come on so fast that another inning would have been impossible.

A slashing three-bagger to the centre field fence by Jake Daubert with one out in Brooklyn's half of the ninth inning put the Superbas in position to tie up the game and force the Cardinals into an extra inning. Zach Wheat followed Daubert with a sharp drive to right field which ended its speedy flight in Evans's hands, but it was good enough to chase Daubert in. The Cardinals went out peacefully in their half of the tenth, a pass to Wylie, who batted for Steele, breaking the one-two-three procession back to the bench.

Davidson, with two successive hits to his credit, was the first Superba to face Harmon in the tenth, the latter taking Steele's place in this inning. Davidson spanked a sharp single into left field and after Barger had popped to Mowrey on his attempted sacrifice, Davidson stole second. Zimmerman's infield out sent "Davy" along to third, and Erwin was purposely passed. Stark was then sent in to bat for Schardt and he responded with a drive over Hauser's head, chasing Davidson across with the winning run.

Up to the closing innings both teams played a loose game. Errors were not frequent, but neither team exhibited any wonderful steadiness in the box. The Superbas were gathering hits off Steele and the Cardinals were accepting passes from Burk or Schardt. Brooklyn threw away some fine chances to pile up a big lead in the early innings through inability to hit with men on bases, and in the sixth Burk tossed away the 3 to 1 lead which his team enjoyed and put the Cardinals in front, 4 to 3. In this spasm of wildness the Cardinals batted around without getting a hit and all the time the Superbas failed to make an error. The puzzle is explained by the fact that Burk gave three passes, hit two batsmen, and started to pass a fourth. After two wide flings he was chased and Schardt, who succeeded him, finished the game. The bases were filled when Schardt fanned Oakes for the third out. Both Brooklyn pitchers were very effective in keeping down the hits, but between them they handed out ten passes and hit two batsmen.

Stark's pinch hit which brought victory was far from being the headliner of the game. The Mr. Limelight of the struggle was Zach Wheat, who covered left garden for the Superbas. And he certainly did cover the garden. Four spectacular catches were among the seven that he gobbled up in his pasture, and he added to his brilliant catches with a throw to the plate in the fifth inning, retiring Huggins when the latter tried to score from second on a single by Oakes. In the third inning, with two on bases, Wheat galloped far into deep left centre and pulled in a drive by Oakes that was labeled three bases at least. In the fourth he ran back toward the clubhouse and pulled in a tremendous drive by Mowrey while Hauser was galloping to the plate. Another probable triple smothered. In the fifth he threw Huggins out at the plate. In the ninth he saved the game with a remarkable one-hand catch in deep left field off Hauser. Two were out at the time and Konetchy and Evans were rushing in with runs when the catch occurred. In the tenth he ran in toward second base and while going at full speed pulled in a drive by Mowrey. Zach also made three ordinary catches.

Wheat drove in Brooklyn's first run in the opening inning with a single to centre after Tooley's single and steal. Zimmerman's single and Tooley's single, which rolled through Ellis and allowed Tooley to complete the circuit, gave the Superbas two more runs in the fourth inning. A pass, two infield outs, and Davidson's single netted another in the seventh. Daubert's triple and Wheat's sacrifice fly tied up the score in the ninth, and then came the tenth with Davidson's single and steal and Stark's smash to victory.

A single by Bliss, two passes, and Oakes's sacrifice fly gave the Cardinals a run in the third inning. Four passes, two hit batsmen, and a sacrifice fly by Mowrey netted three more in the sixth. Konetchy's double and an error by Barger in right field gave the Cardinals their last run in the seventh inning. The score:

"Cy" Young Fails to Come Back.

BOSTON, Aug. 22.—"Cy" Young made his reappearance in a National League game to-day after an absence of eleven years in American League parks and was knocked out of the box by Cincinnati after they scored 8 runs off his delivery in the first three innings. He received poor support. The visitors won, 11 to 9, although Boston forced Frank Smith to cover, scoring 8 runs in the fifth and tying the score in the eighth inning. The score:

FIGHT "STUPID AND ROTTEN."

Marquis of Queensberry's Opinion of Papke-Burke Bout Last Night.

"It was a stupid fight. In fact, it was too rotten to talk about."

Such was the expression of the Marquis of Queensberry, the English peer and son of the Marquis whose name has so much prominence in boxing, by reason of having framed the rules which govern the sport, at the Twentieth Century A. C. last night after the Burke-Papke bout. The sentiments of the titled Englishman were unanimously voiced by more than 2,500 followers of pugilism who crowded into the St. Nicholas Rink to see the much-advertised bout, on which the middleweight championship of the world might hinge.

The bout was nothing more than a joke as far as boxing or fighting goes. What few honors there were to distribute at the close of the encounter necessarily belonged to the Brooklyn sailor, but in reality there was little glory for either. As a disappointment the affair far surpassed anything in the line of a pugilistic exhibition staged in this city in many months. Round after round the spectators voiced their disapproval of the men's actions by hissing and hooting, and in the closing rounds Referee Charlie White became so disgusted at the refusal of the pair to stop clinching and fight that he leaned against the ropes and made no effort to interfere with them as they hugged each other and waltzed around the ring. Cries of "Take 'em out!" began to make themselves heard in the opening rounds, and they continued to the end. A more disappointed crowd of fistic lovers has not filed out of a local club in many, many months.

Papke's rating in the middleweight division took a decided drop after last night's fiasco. In fact it began to drop almost as soon as the bell rang for the pair to get together. At no time during the ten rounds did he display any of the ability of which champions are made and it must be a decidedly off season in that division if he stands at the top. It was the general opinion of the crowd which saw Papke's efforts last night that he does not stand a remote chance of ever gaining the honors of a fighter like Frank Klaus.

Lack of condition can hardly be given as the reason for the showing. The bout was originally scheduled for an earlier date and was put over at Papke's request and he had plenty of time to get in condition. If he was in condition last night he has gone back considerably since his memorable encounters with Stanley Ketchel. It was the general impression that Papke could do better than he did last night and for that reason he was roundly jeered for the way he fought.

Jeannette and Maxson at Fairmont.

Joe Jeannette, the colored light heavyweight, will find a formidable foe at the Fairmont Athletic Club to-night in Dummy Maxson, who, although not so experienced a boxer, is nevertheless a rugged, hard-hitting fighter. The negro has been training for the bout at West Hoboken, and does not look for an easy time with Maxson. Jeannette is the first boxer of any note that the Dummy has had the opportunity of fighting, and he realizes that a favorable showing against a man of the negro's calibre means much for his future before local fight clubs. Maxson has been training in Brooklyn, and is ready to put up the best bout of his career. They will box at catch weights.

The main bout at the Long Acre Athletic Association to-night will be between Johnny Waltz and Jack Denning. It will be a hard-fought battle, as the boys are evenly matched, and have trained hard for this go. Denning has a big following on the west side, and will have a number of rooters to cheer him. Waltz comes from Jersey, and is a rugged, ambitious boxer. There will be a semi-final of six rounds and four preliminary bouts.

Malia Wins from Mackey.

Mike Malia of Boston and Biz Mackey, rugged featherweights, fought ten slam-bang rounds last night at Brown's Gymnasium, in which the Bostonian won by a slight margin. The boys were evenly matched and used the same style of attack, boring in with head down and pounding the body, rather than standing up and exchanging blows at a distance. During most of the time they came to the centre of the ring and locked their heads over each other's shoulders and slashed away at the body with both hands. The bout did not lack action, but it was of such a peculiar style, with both clinched and slamming away, that it got on the nerves of Bill Brown, who refereed the contest, and in the fourth round he had to give way to his feelings and caution the boys to fight rather than wrestle.

WORLD'S RECORD SHOOTING.

Ohio Riflemen Score 1,732 for Herrick Trophy at Camp Perry.

CAMP PERRY, Ohio, Aug. 22.—The matches of the National Rifle Association came to a close to-night after a day of record-breaking scores in the Herrick trophy match and a closely contested race in the President's match. The Ohio team won the Herrick with the score of 1,732, which breaks the world's record for long range rifle shooting with any rifle and ammunition on the 800, 900, and 1,000 yard ranges. The score exceeds the record score of the all-American team in the Palma match in 1907 by twenty points, and is greater than the record in the celebrated English Elcho shield match, which is shot under similar conditions.

The first team of the Navy finished second with 1,630, two teams of the Marine Corps third and fourth, and the Army Infantry team fifth. The other winners were Ohio's second team, the United States Cavalry, and the second team of the Navy.

The aggregate revolver match was won by Dr. J. H. Snook of Columbus, Ohio, with an aggregate for the shoot of 3,680. Other winners were C. E. Orr, 3,625, and Leroy Lyons, Colorado Cavalry, 3,590.

The President's match was won by Corporal C. A. Lloyd of the United States Marines with a score of 281. The match was won last year by Sergt. W. A. Fragner of the Marine Corps with a score of 283.

RENEW THE LINING OF YOUR AUTO TOP

Linings of automobile tops soon become faded, spotted and streaked. A most valuable discovery is the RUB-ON AUTO TOP LINING DYE, which quickly re-dyes the lining, penetrating the cloth, insuring an even color. It is easily applied with a sponge and cannot wash out when the top is wet. THE RUB-ON renewer is manufactured by the Rub-on Varnish Co., 333 Elm St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Aug. 22.—The Yankees toyed with the Tigers to-day, ending the three-game series at Bennett Park with a 9-to-4 victory. It could have been 9 to 2 had Ford and his pals cared to make it so. It was a tiresome game to look at, because of the listlessness of the Bengals. The Yankees caught the fever after awhile, and also played listlessly. There was not a single fielding play on either side worthy of note. Ford's pitching was about the only good thing of a defensive nature.

The class of this appeared in the first inning. Russell whiffed Bush to begin his day's work, then did the same thing to Cobb. In each instance the third strike was a perfect one, straight over, and called. Cobb kicked so hard on his that he was invited to take a rest on the bench. He said in such irritated terms he didn't need a rest that Umpire Evans finally banished him altogether. His absence hurt the Tigers. Shaller went to centre field. He didn't have a chance there until the ninth inning, but he had a chance to bat. As an example of his prowess it might be stated that on his first time up he thumped one to Hartzell, and, imagining the play might be close, slid to first. A laudable bit of strategy, but he commenced his slide some twenty feet away, and made only about half that distance before he was nabbed. This happened when the Tigers were attempting to overcome a four-run lead grabbed by the New Yorks before the Bengals had had a chance to bat at all.

Wolter started the game with a slam to Delehanty, and beat the throw. He died stealing, however. Hemphill dumped one in front of Mullin and was safe, despite the pitcher's fast fielding. Chase dropped a short liner in centre field, Cobb getting it in time to hold Hemphill at second. Cree singled to right, scoring Hemphill. Knight got a crack on the head which eventually caused his retirement from the battle, but while there was need for his services, he was game and stuck, after a couple of minutes' rest at full length on the turf. Hartzell flied to Drake, Chase scoring on the throw in. Johnson sent Cree and Knight across with a triple to right, but languished, while Sweeney popped to Bush. Mullin was seen no more on the mound.

Willett, rescue heaver, did finely for a couple of innings, only Hemphill seeing first base. He walked and was nipped off the station. In the fourth inning Hartzell and Johnson walked in succession. But Sweeney banged one to Bush, on which the midget engineered a double play. Hartzell took third, whence he tallied on a wild pitch.

More of the same in the fifth inning, Wolter and Hemphill walking. Delehanty let Chase's bounder elude him, and the corners were all occupied. Wolter scooted home while Baumann was throwing out Cree, and after Caldwell, who had replaced Knight, had fouled, Hemphill and Chase completed the circuit on a single by Hartzell.

Then enters Works. He also started off like a wonder, retiring three batsmen in order in the sixth inning, and getting by without damage in the seventh. In the eighth inning the Yankees scored one run, just to show that they could. Two were out when Ford walked. He stole when Casey, installed in Stanage's armor to make the game a bigger joke, threw to centre. Then Wolter drove him home with a single past second base.

Two errors helped the Tigers to their first run. The other they obtained by effective batting. The last two were manufactured by an error, some "horse play," and a triple by Baumann.

NEW CHAMPIONS IN NATIONAL TENNIS

Little and Touchard Defeat Alexander and Hackett at Newport.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 22.—Driven back from the net, the lawn tennis doubles champions of four successive years, Frederick B. Alexander and Harold H. Hackett, were defeated to-day by Gustave F. Touchard and Raymond D. Little, the challengers and Eastern champions, by the score of 7—5, 13—15, 6—2, 6—4.

The match was one of the fastest ever seen upon the turf courts of the Casino, and one of the largest crowds that ever assembled about the championship stretch of turf was on hand to liberally cheer the victors. How closely the two pairs fought for the crown of supremacy in the doubles may be seen from the games' tally, which was 32 games to 26, 208 points to 199 points.

The chief asset of the challengers was their shots for placement. Touchard and Little scored 102 points in this manner, to 55 for the defending champions. They were not so steady, however, and this cost them dearly, as they hazarded all upon dangerous shots often, with the result that they lost a total of 140 points on nets and outs, to 108 for the defenders. Little was stronger than Touchard, as he scored 54 shots by placement and passing, while Touchard only scored 48. Then Touchard made 50 outs, to his partner's 35, while Little netted 30 balls to Touchard's 25.

In the same manner, Alexander, who performed in phenomenal fashion as to his wonderful sets that were calculated for aces, scored 31 shots for placement, to 24 for Hackett. Hackett was far the steadier of the two, and he had far less outs and nets.

The overthrowing of the champions, who have held the title continuously since 1907, was the feature of the day. They took the title originally by winning the Western doubles, and then by the default of Holcomb Ward and Beals C. Wright. As they have held nearly all of the doubles titles of any prominence in this country, their record has never been duplicated by any other pair. Little, for the first time in his long career on the American courts, becomes the joint holder of a National championship which he has long sought.

The scores of the doubles match by points and sets follows:

TWO FAVORITES WIN.

The Eel and Border Guard Capture Races in Straight Heats.

GOSHEN, N. Y., Aug. 22.—The first day of the Grand Circuit races here attracted a big crowd to the historic track, which was in superb condition. Favorites won in the free-for-all pace and the 2:20 trot, which were taken in straight heats. Mattatto, a roan gelding, owned by Andrew W. Smith of New York and driven by Nolan, went a mile in 2:27¼ to beat his record of 2:30¼. In the 2:24 trot six heats were required to decide the event, which proved the most exciting of the day. Union, a black gelding, owned by Robert Proctor of Readville, Mass., was distanced in the fifth heat after taking the first two. Sterling Hall overcame all his antagonists at last, winning his race, and securing first and fourth monies. Summaries:

Diversify Your Investments

It is a good plan to distribute money among different types of investment, rather than to place it all in any one particular property. This method of investing makes a strong appeal to those investors who require good security and stability, combined with a liberal rate of income.

Write for our Circular No. 820, "Judicious Investment," which treats this subject in detail, and which is accompanied by a diversified list of offerings yielding a return averaging approximately 5½ per cent.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Most Stocks Close at an Advance After Irregular Fluctuations Following Weak Opening.

HEAVY BORROWING OF STOCK

Trading Concentrated Upon a Few Issues—Some Selling Reported from Abroad on Moroccan News.

Trading was attended with much irregularity in prices yesterday, but the balance was on the side of improvement. After a very weak opening, particularly in Union Pacific, which suffered an overnight loss of 1¼ points, there was some further decline and then a rapid recovery succeeded by narrower fluctuations, which left the majority of stocks at the end of the day above Monday's close. There was very little activity except in Union Pacific, United States Steel, and Reading, and the trading in these three stocks made up over 400,000 shares out of a total of 578,000. The transactions were thus more concentrated than at any time in the recent past, which helped to strengthen the impression which some other features of the market created, that the dealings had become very largely professional in character. One of the undetermined elements in the market is the size of the short interest which has been built up during the irregular movements of the past week. During the decline, which lasted from the beginning of August until the middle of last week, the amount of stock which came into the market was so great that short sales were covered without the least difficulty and there were some indications that at the low point of last week the short interest was not by any means as large as that which at times in the past was formed during the course of similar declines. There appears, however, to have been further short selling on the rallies which have occurred, and in some quarters yesterday the impression prevailed that the short interest had become extended. Union Pacific loaned freely at 1 per cent., and this naturally lent color to the existence of a very large short interest in that as well perhaps as in other stocks. Not all stock that is borrowed, however, represents short sales, and it is never possible definitely to determine how much of the stock is being borrowed to make deliveries against short sales and how much is borrowed for other purposes. After periods of liquidation the short interest is sometimes made to appear greater than it is because of borrowing of stocks to replace others, which have been sold by customers of brokers who have carried the stocks in time loans and who are thus under the necessity of borrowing stocks to keep their loans good. This factor may be operative at the present time.

Advices regarding the Moroccan situation were somewhat unsettling, but the conviction was just as strong in banking circles yesterday as at any earlier period of the present discussion over the relations of the European powers to that country that an amicable adjustment of the matter will be arrived at. The early trading in the London market, however, was unsettled, and that market sent over lower prices for most of our stocks, a fact which was partly responsible for the over-night decline in the New York market. A decline in Baltimore & Ohio from 102 to 100 was attributed to German selling, though the origin of the sales attributed to that market was not altogether clear. There appeared, also, to be moderate foreign selling of some other stocks, but this hardly assumed sufficient proportions to be consequential in the market as a whole. Congress brought its prolonged special session to a close yesterday afternoon. The veto of the tariff bills passed by Congress puts over without settling the proposed revision of the schedules covered in those bills and leaves the business of the country still confronted with the uncertainty which always attends impending changes in import duties.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

The frequent changes in market tone left trading sentiment on the Consolidated Stock Exchange decidedly "mixed" at the end of the day. Nervousness was the prominent characteristic, with quotations exhibiting a good deal of irregularity, compared with prices on the New York Stock Exchange. Among the room traders bears were in the majority early in the day, but they were not especially aggressive and were quick about securing their profits on the short side on the subsequent declines. Their covering at such times imparted relative firmness to prices.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

Exchanges Unfavorably Affected by Moroccan Situation.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—Money and discount rates were quiet to-day.

The stock market was dull and irregular. Home rails partly recovered an early loss, but Kaffirs and foreign shares were easy on Continental selling and the Moroccan situation. Gilt-edged securities closed steady.

American securities, after a quiet opening, moved irregularly until Berlin selling caused a loss of two points in Canadian Pacific. The rest of the list weakened in sympathy, but Wall Street support caused a sharp recovery in the late trading. The close was irregular.

Money, 1½ per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 2½ per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for three months' bills is 2¾ per cent.

Gold premium at Madrid, 3.45; at Lisbon, 7.

PARIS, Aug. 22.—Transactions were limited, and prices closed lower on the Bourse to-day. The market was unfavorably affected by the indefiniteness of the Moroccan negotiations.

Three per cent. rentes, 94 francs 50 centimes for the account.

Exchange on London, 25 francs 27 centimes for checks.

BERLIN, Aug. 22.—The decline in New York yesterday caused pronounced weakness on the Boerse here to-day.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Unit System of Organization.

The present tendency of the management of the Union Pacific, so far as organization is concerned, is in the opposite direction from that which prevailed in the lifetime of E. H. Harriman. Under Mr. Harriman's régime the organization was centralized to a point that was unprecedented in the railway business. In effect all power was centred in the hands of Mr. Harriman himself. The present management is working along lines of decentralization through the adoption of the so-called unit system. Under this plan there is much greater independence of action and initiative in the management of each administrative division or "unit." The plan is the subject of an address by Julius Kruttschnitt, Vice President of the system, in charge of operation, which has just been published. "Good organization," says Mr. Kruttschnitt, "and good administration demand such a system of checks and balances that centralization will not be carried to the extent of devitalizing the units below. There is far more danger of this evil under modern conditions than there is of looseness and incoherence from according latitude to subordinates."

Duller in Bonds.

Yesterday's transactions in bonds totaled $1,199,500, the smallest full day's business in this department since Sept. 8, 1910, when the aggregate was $1,083,000. The falling off in activity was common to the entire list, though it was remarkable that, despite the heavy trading in Union Pacific stock, the road's convertible fours reported transactions of only $105,000, equivalent to only about 10,000 shares of stock. The other convertible issues, too, were relatively as dull. The most active issues were the fours and sixes of the American Tobacco Company, but even here the totals at the close of the day were less than in many recent markets. Activity in the bond list has been falling off for some time not only in aggregate sales, but in the diversity of issues dealt in, a feature which a few months ago was a notable characteristic of the bond market.

Economies Show in July Earnings.

The Baltimore & Ohio's returns for July, issued yesterday, are the first railroad earnings for the month to appear, and show the effect of retrenchment in an increase of net in the face of a falling off in gross. Figures for the fiscal year ended June 30 show that the Baltimore & Ohio was one of the systems quick to meet losses on business with curtailment of expenses. In the first month of the new year the gross earnings were $7,821,157, a falling off of $226,576 as compared with July, 1910. A reduction of expenses amounting to $348,432, as compared with the previous year left that item at $5,[illegible], and made net earnings $2,[illegible], an actual increase over July, 1910, of $121,150.

Indications of Slack Interest.

One of the indications of the slack interest taken by the general public in the stock market, even at the lower prices now prevailing, is found in the light demand for Stock Exchange loans. One banker related yesterday his experience with one Stock Exchange customer, which while of course an extreme case, bears on conditions. When the liquidation began a few weeks ago this Stock Exchange house was carrying a fair amount of time money as well as call loans. Stocks disappeared so rapidly from the firm's margin accounts as the slump progressed that its need of call accommodations ended, and it became a burden to keep up the time loan, which does not mature till December. Within a few days the brokers applied to the bank for permission to take up the time loan, explaining that the firm was now carrying only an inconsiderable amount of stocks on margin, and would rather pay up its time loan than borrow securities to keep with the bank as collateral.

September Dividends Less.

Disbursements for dividends in September will approximate $2,000,000 less than last year, according to the declarations of September dividends made up to Aug. 18, as compiled by The Wall Street Journal. Few declarations of September disbursements are made later than Aug. 15. While the stockholders' pay roll has shrunk, according to this estimate, the bondholders will collect nearly $1,500,000 more than in the previous September. Combined dividend and interest payments scheduled for next month aggregate $94,000,000, dividends calling for more than $55,000,000 and interest payments for more than $38,500,000. The largest disbursement in any month this year was the $251,000,000 paid in July.

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The Consular and Trade Report will note the following foreign trade opportunities. Further information regarding these may be obtained by addressing the Bureau of Manufactures, care of the Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C., giving the number of item referred to:

7,205. WATCHES, DRUGS AND MACHINERY.—A society organized for the promotion of trade between Persia and the United States writes the Bureau of Manufactures that a large number of inquiries have been received from that country regarding American goods as an outcome of the receipt of various catalogues sent through that organization to its agents abroad. Catalogues for drugs and medicines, small printing presses, implements for blacksmiths, and cheap watches are in demand at present. American manufacturers in these lines desiring to get in touch with the trade will be given the addresses of the Persian agents through the officers of the society in the United States.

7,206. AUTOMOBILES.—An American consular officer in Canada reports that an automobile concern in his district is desirous of receiving catalogues and correspondence from American automobile manufacturers not already represented in that territory. This is a new firm, which up to the present time has dealt only in second hand automobiles and the exchange of cars, but now wishes to extend its business to include the sale of automobiles.

7,207. MINERAL PHOSPHATES.—A business man in a European country informs an American consulate that he is desirous of corresponding with firms in the United States handling mineral phosphates, such as are produced in Florida or Tennessee.

7,208. NOVELTIES FOR ADVERTISING PURPOSES.—A report from an American consular officer in Canada states that a business concern in his district is anxious to receive catalogues and correspondence from American manufacturers of novelties, particularly those for advertising purposes.

7,209. FIRE FIGHTING SYSTEMS.—The Bureau of Manufactures is in receipt of a communication from a business house in the West Indies stating that it has been commissioned by four large cities to prepare plans for a fire fighting system in the cities in question. The firm would like to receive details immediately from all firms dealing in fire appliances, fire hose, fire plugs for street service, with piping necessary. It is absolutely necessary that firms send samples of hose, piping, and catalogues of plugs, etc., with their prices, as delay means loss to all concerned.

7,210. TENDERS FOR TERMINAL STATION AT QUEBEC.—The American consulate at Quebec has forwarded a newspaper notice to contractors for tenders for a terminal station at Quebec. Bids for the construction and erection in complete accordance with the plans and specifications of the commissioners will be received until Aug. 31, 1911. Any further information desired by American bidders can be obtained upon application to the Chief Engineer of the Trans-Continental Railway at Ottawa and also to Mr. A. E. Doucen, District Engineer, Quebec, Province of Quebec. The services of the American consulate will be at the disposal of any American contractor desirous of putting in a bid for this structure, the cost of which is expected to exceed $500,000.

HOME TRADE OPPORTUNITIES.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Further information regarding the following home trade opportunities may be obtained by addressing the Bureau of Manufactures, care of the Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C., giving the number of item referred to:

283. PANAMA CANAL SUPPLIES.—Sealed proposals in triplicate will be received at the office of the General Purchasing Officer of the Isthmian Canal Commission, Washington, until Sept. 6, 1911, for furnishing steel rails, splice bars, tie plates, track bolts, and screw spikes. (Circular 648.)

284. CONSTRUCTING EARTHWORK.—Sealed proposals for constructing about 527,000 cubic yards of earthwork in the Lower Tensas and Lafouche levee districts will be received at the United States Engineer Office, Metropolitan Bank Building, New Orleans, until Sept. 4, 1911, and then publicly opened. Information upon application to H. Burgess, Major Engineers.

Exchange to Consider Extra Holiday.

The Governing Committee of the Stock Exchange is expected to hold a special meeting to-day to pass on the petition of the members to close the Exchange Sept. 2, the Saturday preceding Labor Day. The Cotton Exchange has already decided to close and the Coffee Exchange to remain open. In the past the Stock Exchange has usually closed for the short session thus allowing its members a three-day week-end holiday, from Friday's close to Tuesday morning.

STOCKS OUT OF TOWN

Trading in Diminished Volume, with Irregular Price Movements in Chief Centres.

COPPERS OFF IN BOSTON

Arizona Commercial at New Low Record with Other Conspicuous Declines—Chicago Stocks Generally Firm.

Trading in the principal out-of-town markets yesterday was irregular and generally less active. The local issues made narrow price changes in most instances, although there were isolated showings of strength and equally conspicuous weakness.

While there was a slightly better tone in the Chicago stock market, due to the improvement here, the volume of trading was light. Commonwealth Edison sold somewhat lower, while Diamond Match closed fractionally higher. Chicago Elevated Railways preferred sold at 90, an advance of 2 points, while there were moderate gains elsewhere in the list.

The Boston market opened lower yesterday and the general list made a further decline during the session. Arizona Commercial made a new low record, selling down to 2; Amalgamated broke to 60, and North Butte declined to 24. Trading during the latter part of the day was quiet and the market closed steady at a fractional recovery.

With the exception of the trading in United States Steel and Reading, the local market was devoid of active features to-day. The early break in Steel was quickly followed by a recovery. It was reported from the floor that the short interest in this stock was exceedingly large, the fact being demonstrated by the borrowing demand in the loan crowd. The price rallied close to 73 before the bears renewed their attacks and hammered it down again. It closed firm.

The market continued lifeless in Baltimore. Shares, 102. Bonds, $33,000.

Yesterday's transactions in the various out-of-town Exchanges, as reported to THE NEW YORK TIMES, were as follows:

COMMODITY MARKETS.

WHEAT.—The wheat market was heavy all day, particularly in the Northwest. Winnipeg showed the greatest decline, due to the belief that frost, reported Monday night at a few scattered points, did not do material damage. The weather prediction was more reassuring, and the Canadian market declined nearly 2c a bushel from Monday night's close. American Spring wheat markets were weak, and there was pressure on Winter wheat markets. Considerable stop loss selling developed during the decline. The estimate by the North Dakota Agricultural Commissioner of 80,000,000 bushels for that State was bearish, as it was considerable more than recent bull estimates, and indicated a calmer view of the crop situation. The visible supply decreased, however, 293,000 bushels, compared with an increase of 4,943,000 bushels last year. The Canadian visible decreased 1,493,000 bushels, while the European visible increased 4,600,000 bushels. The net change was 2,814,600 bushels increase, against 10,871,000 bushels increase last year. Receipts of wheat for the day were rather moderate. There was an absence of export interest outside of the reporting of about 32 loads of wheat from outports for St. Petersburg. This was comprised of Durum wheat, which has been taken right along. The foreign crop news was rather favorable, and the Argentine reports tend to confirm the estimates of increased acreage. The future market closed at about the low point of the day. No. 2 red was quoted at 95¾c, free on board; No. 1 Northern, $1.13¾; No. 2 hard, Winter, 98¼c; No. 1 Manitoba, $1.07½.

CORN.—The market was quiet and heavy. Prices declined about ½c a bushel, and closed at the low point. The decline was due to the continued favorable weather conditions and largely increased receipts. The Chicago receipts for the day were 469,000 bushels, and at all points 688,000 bushels. There was a decrease in the visible of 698,000 bushels, and there was a small decrease in the Chicago contract stocks. The general improvement in the weather conditions and the belief that the rains which have been reported in a good many States have made for improvement of the crop, with the increased movement, have tended to bring considerable pressure on the market. Cash corn was quiet, with sales reported of one load for export at New York, and seventeen loads recently at outports. No. 2 was quoted at 71c, free on board, afloat.

OATS.—The market was quiet and easier, declining ½c, closing at a small rally. The selling was influenced by the weakness in other grain, and also by the fact of a large increase in the visible. The stocks gained 3,675,000 bushels, compared with a gain of 6,254,000 bushels last year. The receipts for the past week, however, were over 7,000,000 bushels less than a year ago. This relatively large gain on the much smaller movement was considered indicative of restricted distribution. Cash oats were quiet, with standards, 45c; No. 2 white, 45½c; No. 3 white, 44½c.

PROVISIONS.—The market for hog products was weak, particularly pork, which showed a decline on the September delivery of $1 a barrel due to some closing up of outstanding long accounts. The market generally was influenced by this selling, although the total hog movement was only 60,000 at all points.

COTTONSEED OIL.

A slight increase reported in Southern crude offerings encouraged selling during yesterday's session, with claims also made that export demand was less urgent, although inquiry was still good. It was evident, however, that belated speculative liquidation was a factor, and at the decline offerings were well absorbed. Sentiment is mixed, and while there is some buying of the distant options on the belief that a carrying charge is warranted, the principal bullish opinions expressed seem to be in ference to the near positions based largely on the theory that the South will be a slow seller early and that the carry-over of oil is much smaller than generally supposed.

COTTON.

Trade dwindled to very limited proportions during yesterday's session, and while the undertone at times was rather heavy, no apparent weakness was discernible, with closing prices but slightly changed from Monday's finals, recovering earlier losses of from 5 to 10 points. Sentiment is very much mixed, with a continuation of bullish crop advices from Texas and Oklahoma, offset, however, by the free movement of new cotton and unsettled trade conditions at home, while foreign inquiry is also small. Bull speculation is of an apathetic sort, but on the other hand there is evidence of a fair-sized short interest which tends to limit periods of depressions at present.

The early heaviness in the market was attributed to disappointing Liverpool advices and a forecast officially given, promising unsettled weather, with probable showers, in many sections of Texas, Arkansas, and Oklahoma. Damage claims in the Southwest, however, did not diminish in either tone or volume, and, as high temperatures still prevail, there was an inclination to await developments. However, decidedly lower temperatures are reported in the American and Canadian Northwest, with cooler weather predicted for the corn belt, so that it was thought to be more than likely that the cool wave would permeate many sections of the cotton belt.

The weekly weather Government bulletin was about as anticipated, and had very little effect, although, if anything, it received a slightly bullish construction. Practically no rain was reported in Oklahoma, and only 40 per cent. of the reporting counties in Texas received scattered showers. Some points in Georgia and North Carolina are still in need of rain, with too much moisture complained of in Mississippi.

Private crop accounts continue conflicting, and while it is now generally believed that more than average deterioration for August has occurred in the Western belt, it is thought that other sections have not suffered to so large an extent. Mr. Price, who is at Smithville, Texas, demonstrating the "Price-Campbell Cotton Picking Machine," claimed that without an exceptionally late Autumn the Texas crop is not likely to exceed that of last year. Other predictions, however, were somewhat more optimistic, especially in regard to the East, from where a heavy movement was expected in a week or ten days.

Southern spot markets were unchanged. New York spot cotton, 10 points higher, with middlings 12.60c.

Coffee was barely steady at the opening, first prices being 1 point higher for August and 3 to 5 points lower for the other positions. The market developed strength in the afternoon, closing at a net advance of 8 to 17 points, with total sales of 95,000 bags. The weather was cold in Brazil, but without reports of frost. Havre was ½ lower early, but closed at a net advance of ¼, while Hamburg was ¼ to ⅜ pfennig net lower. In Brazil prices were unchanged. Spot coffee, 13¾c for Rio No. 7. Contract prices:

FALL IN MARKET NOT YET EXPLAINED

The Latest Rumor That Standard Oil Was Selling Out Its Investment Stocks Is Denied.

SOME STANDARD MEN SELL

Oil Trust Itself Announces That It Never Held Stock Exchange Stocks—But It Is a Large Holder of Bonds.

Another of the current stories purporting to explain the sources of the stock market liquidation which became marked at the beginning of this month and has put prices down from ten to twenty points was officially denied yesterday after it had crystallized into published reports. It was that the Standard Oil Company had been forced by the Supreme Court decision to market stocks in which its enormous surplus had been largely invested. The exact amount of the Standard Oil Company's surplus is not made public, but with dividend payments of only $40,000,000 annually and profits which in at least one year have been as high as $103,000,000, the company's accumulated resources have been estimated at $461,000,000, and it has been gussed that a large proportion of this has been kept largely in Stock Exchange investments.

It has been the practice of Standard Oil to put funds into high-class bonds for the greater income yield to be obtained therefrom than from interest-bearing deposits with the banks. Those who heard within the past few days that the Standard Oil Company was selling stocks were quite ready to believe that the New Jersey corporation, which must dissolve before the end of the year, might well have accumulated an investment line of dividend-paying stocks whose liquidation would explain just the sort of movement that has been going on in the stock market since the end of July.

It was not generally considered that because the company had been known to be at times a heavy investor in bonds that stock investments were precluded. At any rate, the fact that stocks were coming from individuals high in the Standard Oil Company seemed to be indubitable, and that the selling represented liquidation of the corporation's own investment holdings met with ready acceptance.

The rumor gained publicity through the news tickers. It appeared just before the close of the market, and the ticker ink was hardly dry before the several Standard Oil Directors in town were holding a conference at 26 Broadway. After a short session this statement was issued by the publicity bureau of the company:

> With reference to the story that the Standard Oil Company has been a heavy seller in the stock market, an officer of the company stated that there is no truth whatever in the assertion, and added that the Standard has never made any investments in stocks currently dealt in on the Stock Exchange.

The meeting was attended by Treasurer A. C. Bedford and Secretary H. C. Folger, Jr. Neither would amplify the brief statement or explain just what the present surplus is or how it is carried.

It was noted in the Street that the statement referred only to "stocks." It is well known that the Standard Oil Company has been a large holder of bonds. Up to a few years ago its investments in United States Government bonds were especially heavy. At one time it had between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000 of Government bonds alone, although it is understood to have sold out these holdings.

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey has until Dec. 21 to complete the distribution of its holdings of the stocks of the thirty-three subsidiaries which were codefendants in the Government suits. It is the general expectation in the Street that stockholders will get their allotments of the subsidiary stocks some weeks before that time. The officials of the company are rapidly finishing the details incident to the transfer.

In this connection it was learned yesterday that large individual stockholders and officials of the Stock Exchange, unofficially and as individuals, have made an appeal to the Standard Oil officials to have the stock of the subsidiary companies listed on the Stock Exchange. This would make a ready market for the fractional shares of the subsidiary companies, which will be the preponderating part of the stock distribution, and at the same time, through compliance with the Stock Exchange's requirements for financial reports, furnish the stockholders with information of assets.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Knickerbocker Trust Company has been made transfer agent for the stock of the United States Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry Company. The Central Trust Company will continue to act as registrar.

Ackerman & Coles have issued their annual card giving statistics of the Standard Oil Company, including the high and low prices of each year for twelve years and the dividends.

Application has been made to the Stock Exchange to list $2,000,000 additional Virginia-Carolina Chemical preferred stock.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Gorham Construction Company Buys Big Plot in West Harlem—Deal in the Times Square Section—Important Sales on Washington Heights.

The sale of a large unimproved corner in Harlem for a big apartment house was the feature of the realty market yesterday. The deal involved the northeast corner of Manhattan Avenue and 115th Street, fronting 100 feet on the avenue and 125 feet on 115th Street, purchased by the Gorham Construction Company from Sonn Brothers. The buyers will at once erect a six-story elevator apartment house on the corner.

The property for some time has been covered with a one-story taxpayer containing several stores, but within the last few weeks that portion of the building on the corner just sold has been torn down for the pending improvement.

Sonn Brothers have had for many years a life lease on the entire 115th Street block front from Manhattan to Eighth Avenues, from the former owner, Johnson Livingston, with an option to purchase, which was exercised early this month, and negotiations for the resale and improvement of the Manhattan Avenue corner were immediately entered into with the Gorham Construction Company which has just been formed, the incorporators being Mrs. Sarah Harris, Abraham Levy, and Hortense Levy.

The Livingston family owned the plot for over fifty years. The corner is the only unimproved one in the immediate vicinity. It is within a block of Morningside Park and the locality is well built up with good apartments. The deal, including the proposed building, will aggregate about $400,000.

In the midtown loft zone activity was reflected by the purchase for investment of the seven-story commercial structure at 154 and 156 West Twenty-seventh Street, on a plot 44.4 by 98.9 feet. The property was resold by Arnold, Byrne & Baumann for Samuel Winters to a client. It was purchased through the same brokers about a year ago and has been held recently at $125,000.

Deal in Times Square Section.

The two four-story and basement dwellings, 131 and 133 West Forty-ninth Street, on a plot 44 by 105.5, have been sold to an investor by W. J. Griffiths.

The buildings are located between Sixth and Seventh Avenues, and it is understood that the site will be improved at an early date.

Resale in Greenwich Village.

William P. Jones & Son, who recently sold to M. A. Small for the Steinle Estate the property 716 and 718 Greenwich Street, at the southwest corner of Charles Street, a five-story tenement with three stores, on a lot 40 by 67.6 by irregular, have resold the same to the Colfax Realty Company. This property had not been conveyed in 76 years.

The same firm has also sold to the Colfax Realty Company, the property at 1 Duane Street, on the northeast corner of Rose Street, a four-story tenement with stores on a lot 33.4 by 47 by irregular.

Investors Buy Tenements.

Isaac Hattenbach has sold for Samuel Hirshfeld 258 East Seventy-eighth Street, a five-story double flat on a lot 25 by 100, to an investor.

Max Marx has sold to Emma S. Truckenbrodt 186 and 188 West 135th Street, a five-story apartment house, on plot 50 by 100.

Private Dwellings Sold.

William Atkinson has sold through the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company 8 Attorney Street, a three-story building, on a lot 21 by 100 by irregular. The parcel is located between Grand and Division Streets.

The three-story and basement private dwelling at 416 Convent Avenue, on plot 16 by 75, has been sold to a client for occupancy by Daniel H. Renton & Co.

Leroy Coventry has sold for George F. Johnson to the Astor Sanatorium, 203 West Seventieth Street, a four and a half story American basement dwelling, 100 feet west of Broadway, covering a lot 15.6 by 100.

The estate of Justice A. Proben has sold through W. F. Anderson & Co. 970 Lexington Avenue, a three-story and basement dwelling on a lot 16 by 80. The buyer is R. E. Simon.

Realty Company Buys Heights Plot.

Floyd W. Davis has resold the lot, 25 by 100, on the west side of Edgecomb Avenue, opposite 153d Street, and has also sold the adjoining fifty feet for Samuel Green to the Great Centres Realty Company.

The purchaser now controls a plot 75 by 100, which will be improved by the erection of a nine-story elevator apartment house. Heil & Stern negotiated the deal.

Another Amsterdam Ave. Purchase.

Another sale of Amsterdam Avenue property in the Washington Heights section, which has been unusually active during the past week or ten days, was reported yesterday by Max Marx, who purchased a lot, 25 by 100, on the west side of the Avenue, 75 feet north of 179th Street. Title to the property was held by Emma Sands.

$300,000 Park Avenue Loan.

The Montana Realty Company, which proposes to build a twelve-story apartment house on the east side of Park Avenue, just north of Fifty-third Street, has secured a loan of $300,000 on the property from the Mutual Life Insurance Company.

This operation, which is the first of its kind in the Park Avenue neighborhood, north of the new Grand Central, will take in a frontage of 75 feet on the avenue, with an "L" running around to Fifty-third Street.

Leases.

H. C. Senior & Co. leased for J. Seeley Ward, Jr., the dwelling 118 West Sixty-fourth Street, to William Busch; for Emma V. Sherman, the dwelling 20 West Ninety-first Street, to Beatrice Eberhard; for William S. Patten, the dwelling 119 West Sixty-fourth Street, to Kate McRae, and for H. A. Walton, the store at 822 Amsterdam Avenue, to Samuel Goldstein.

Everett M. Seixas & Co. have leased for the Five Hundred and Seventy Fifth Avenue Company offices in the Columbia Bank Building to Walter J. Lowenhaupt and Mortimer Kaphan.

Moore & Schutte have leased for Mrs. C. A. Barnett the three-story and basement dwelling 540 West 142d Street, to R. W. Murray.

Leonard J. Muhlfelder has leased in conjunction with Mark Rafalsky & Co. for the Harwell Realty Company 6,000 square feet in the building at 50 to 54 West Seventeenth Street, to the Popular Waist Company; 6,000 square feet to Guinzberg & Gross, and for the Realty Assets Company, Incorporated, 7,500 square feet, 5 and 7 East Sixteenth Street, to Guinzberg & Lang.

New Realty Company.

M. Morgenthau, Jr., President of the M. Morgenthau, Jr., Company, has organized a new realty company to be known as the Burgh Realty Company, which has just been incorporated at Albany. Those interested in the new company are several purchasers at the recent auction sale of Woodmere property and one or two other operators. The Burgh Realty Company has purchased from these parties and others ninety-five lots sold at the Woodmere auction. The Directors of the Burgh Realty Company will be Benjamin F. [illegible], Jesse Wasburg, B. K. Bloch, [illegible] Mendel, and M. Morgenthau, Jr. The new company has appointed W. [illegible] Macdonald its agent for the resale of the [illegible].

[illegible] CUSTOMS RULINGS.

[illegible] of Garlic Bulbs Cannot be [illegible] in Ascertaining Weight.

The garlic importing trade met with defeat yesterday when the Board of United States General Appraisers held that in assessing duty by weight upon the product consisting of the garlic bulb with the top or stalk attached, sometimes imported in the forms of braided strands and sometimes loose, no allowance is to be made by the customs officials for the weight of the tops. The protests, stand in the names of L. Vitelli & Sons, Emil Zucca, and F. Romeo & Co., but the entire trade is affected directly by the decision.

When the present tariff act, that of 1909, was enacted, no change was made in the language or rate of duty, which is 1 cent a pound, from the law of 1897. No question arises in the protests as to the paragraph under which the garlic should be assessed. It is claimed, however, that a certain allowance should be made for the weight of the tops of the garlic, which are included in the importations and weighed in ascertaining the number of pounds upon which duty should be assessed.

Considerable testimony was produced by the importers which tends to show that the tops constitute about 10 per cent. of the full net weight as returned by the examiner. The importers in making these tests selected a certain number of hampers, one or two from each of the invoices. Separating the tops from the bulbs and weighing the tops showed 10 per cent. of the full net weight to be tops. Judge Waite stated in his decision for the board, that the amount found depends upon how much of the top is cut off from the garlic bulb.

The protestants alleged that the tops are of no use as garlic and are left on the bulbs solely for convenience in handling the goods. Judge Waite appears to doubt whether the leaving of the tops on the bulbs is for the purpose of packing and protection in shipment, or whether the condition of the garlic is improved by allowing the tops to stay on. He thinks it very reasonable for the latter purpose. The protest is accordingly overruled.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Practically nothing remains of the Northwest disturbance of Sunday and Monday, and pressure has risen generally except in the Northeast and extreme Northwest.

A high area of considerable magnitude overlies the Missouri and Mississippi Valleys and the Northwest, accompanied by temperatures that range from 5 to 25 degrees below the seasonal average.

Freezing temperature was reported Tuesday morning in Northwestern North Dakota.

In the East and South temperatures continue moderate.

The cool weather will extend over the Central Valleys and the Southwest on Wednesday, and New England and the Middle Atlantic States by Thursday.

In the South moderate temperatures will again be rising generally by Thursday.

The aggregate acreage of this second parcel being 3361.

This grant being subject to all legal highways, the right of way of The Hocking Valley Railway, and a lease of about ten acres, now held by The Vinton County Coal & Mining Company.

Together with the appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining, and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents, issues and profits thereof; and all and singular the mills, factories and structures now situate on the property hereinbefore described, or any part thereof; and all machinery, fixtures, tools, appliances and property of every kind and description forming a part of the manufacturing plant and equipment of such properties and premises; and all rights, liberties, privileges and franchises which are now the property of or used for or in connection with the business of the Company, including trade-marks, trade-names, processes, franchises, patents, patent rights, copyrights, licenses, and inventions of every kind and nature whatsoever; and any and all real property and all the estate, right, title, interest, property, possession, claim and demand whatsoever, as well in law as in equity, of Alma Cement Company of, in, and to the above-described premises and property, and every part and parcel thereof.

The Special Master will receive no bid from any one who shall not first deposit with him as a pledge that he will make his bid good in case of acceptance, the sum of $5,000 in cash or by certified check on any National Bank or Trust Company, or bonds issued under and secured by the said mortgage and deed of trust of the aggregate face amount of $25,000. The deposit received from any unsuccessful bidder will be returned to him when the property shall be struck off. The deposit received from the successful bidder shall be applied on account of the purchase price. The Special Master will accept no bid of less than $500,000, and unless such sum shall be bid the sale will be adjourned. Upon the acceptance of any bid the bidder shall forthwith deposit with the Special Master the sum of $15,000 in cash or by certified check on any National Bank or Trust Company, or $75,000 face amount of said bonds; but any cash or bonds which may have been previously deposited by the successful bidder as a pledge that he would make good his bid, shall be received on account of the amount required of him upon the acceptance of his bid. In lieu of the actual deposit of bonds with the Special Master for any purpose aforesaid, he will accept the certificate of any National Bank or Trust Company that it then holds subject to his order the amount of bonds required with all unmatured coupons attached. In case any bidder shall fail after acceptance of his bid, to comply with any order of the Court relating to the payment thereof or the completion of the purchase, the sums deposited by such bidder, whether paid in cash or by certified check or represented by bonds or certificates, shall be forfeited as a penalty for such failure and shall be applied to the payment of the expenses of a resale and toward making good any deficiency or loss in case the property shall be sold at a less price on any resale, and to such other purposes as the Court may direct. If the Court shall not confirm the sale for which a deposit shall have been made, either by cash, by certified check, in bonds or certificates, such deposit shall be returned to the bidder.

The purchaser or purchasers shall, on the confirmation of the sale by the Court, make such further payment or payments in cash on account of the purchase price as the Court may direct. So much of the purchase price as may not be required by the Court to be paid in cash may either be paid in cash, or the purchaser may turn in to the Special Master bonds and coupons of the defendant, Alma Cement Company, issued under and secured by its said mortgage and deed of trust, and shall be credited on account of the purchase price for bonds and coupons so turned in with the amount which would be paid in cash upon such bonds and coupons out of the net proceeds of sale if the whole amount of the purchase price were to be paid in cash.

The purchaser as part of the consideration for such sale and in addition to the price bid, shall take the property subject to any liens which may have been or may hereafter be established as having priority over said mortgage and deed of trust.

The Special Master will provisionally accept the highest bid made at the sale, and if such bid shall thereafter be confirmed by the Court, and the purchaser shall complete his purchase, either by payment of cash or by payment in bonds to the extent and as permitted in said decree, or by payment partly in cash and partly in bonds, then the purchaser shall forthwith be let into possession of the property and premises sold.

For a more detailed statement of the terms and conditions of the sale, reference is hereby made to said decree on file with the Clerk of the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of Ohio, Eastern Division, at Columbus, Ohio.

Dated, Columbus, Ohio, August 2, 1911.

CHARTER CHANGED TO SUIT CONTROLLER

All of a Sudden the Committee Announces His Powers of Audit Will Be Restored.

TALKED WITH MAYOR FIRST

A Chief Objection to the Charter Removed—Protest Against Charter's Enlarging the Mayor's Authority.

To the very great surprise of many persons who attended the hearing on the proposed new Charter for this city in the Aldermanic Chamber at the City Hall yesterday afternoon, announcement was made, on behalf of the Cities Committees of the Senate and Assembly, before which the hearings are held, preliminary to whipping the Charter bill into shape for final passage, that provisions having to do with the auditing powers of the Controller would be restored to conform with the provisions of the present Charter.

The announcement came at the opening of the afternoon session, when the committees had scheduled for hearing the chapters in the Cullen-Foley Charter bill dealing with the Finance Department, the Law Department, and the proposed new Department of the City Treasury.

Deputy Controller Douglas Mathewson was just preparing to begin a vigorous attack on the provision depriving the Controller of some of the most important powers he now exercises in his capacity as watchdog of the City Treasury, when Assemblyman James A. Foley, Chairman of the Assembly Committee on the Affairs of Cities, made it known that the Charter framers had decided to reverse themselves. The Deputy Controller, in common with pretty nearly everybody else in the Chamber, looked in blank surprise. Mr. Foley felt obliged to repeat the announcement, that its portent might be grasped.

Senator Thomas H. Cullen of Kings, who presides at the hearing, made it known later that the decision leading up to this important concession had been reached by the committee during the noon recess.

Conference with the Mayor.

Assemblyman Foley, who represents Tammany Leader Murphy's district in the lower house and who has taken a very active part in the preparation of the Charter, had conferred with Mayor Gaynor at the City Hall, and Jeremiah T. Mahoney, who was appointed special assistant counsel to the committees some time ago, attended the conference.

This naturally led to the inference that the change of front on the part of the Charter framers was due to pressure or suggestions from the Mayor. While the committee members were together Assemblyman Alfred E. Smith, majority leader of the lower house and the spokesman on the floor for the "organization," came and joined them. Senator Cullen, when questioned, said that no word suggesting the concession had come from the Mayor to him.

"I can only speak for myself, of course," said the Senator, "but my impression is that the change is due to the consensus of opinion voiced by members of the committees at a little talk we had during the recess."

Statements made on the authority of the committee prior to the change of front yesterday afternoon have made it abundantly clear that provisions which under the announcement of Chairman Cullen will be eliminated from the Charter had been written in with deliberation, and to accomplish purposes which readily may be inferred from reading Section 304, which embodies them. Under this section the looting of the City Treasury by certain department heads would have been rendered easy, for it provides among other things that the Controller "without examination, audit, or certificate" must pay among other things:

The Provisions Corrected.

Amounts certified by the head of a department, board, body, or office to be due on contracts other than open market orders, including contracts for the purchase or lease of real property.

Claims adjusted and settled by the Corporation Counsel.

Fees and disbursements of referees, special counsel, and experts in actions in which the city, or any of its departments, boards, or officers is a party in interest, certified by the Corporation Counsel.

Costs, counsel fees, and expenses of an officer who is a prevailing party to an action or proceeding, when audited by the Board of Estimate.

Amounts expended by each of the following departments, certified by the head of the department, for the following purposes: Health Department, for the cure and prevention of disease; Department of Water, Gas, and Electricity, for prevention of pollution of the water supply; Department of Fire, Health, and Tenement House, for executing orders, the expenses of which are liens upon the property affected.

The Deputy Controller had pointed out that these provisions would result in removing all safeguards, practically, in connection with the payment of city money. Ray B. Smith, assistant counsel of the committees and chief draughtsman of the proposed charter, asked Mr. Mathewson if he would be satisfied if the word "examination" were stricken out. The Deputy Controller said that this would not be sufficient. His contention was that the present auditing powers of the Controller should be left unchanged. Assemblyman Foley from Mr. Murphy's district then spoke up.

"We want to avoid any inference that we are taking away from the Controller the power to examine a claim to find out whether it is fraudulent or whether it is correct," he said. "We do not want that inference to go out. The word 'examination' is, I think, the vital word, and that ought to be eliminated. We never intended to take away the power of the Controller to audit contracts or payments that he has to-day."

Controller's Objections Removed.

"The present Charter," said Mr. Mathewson, "provides not that the Controller shall not audit or examine any claim. He audits and examines every claim under the present Charter."

"That is right," said Mr. Foley.

"If my position is concurred in," Mr. Mathewson broke in—"and my contention is that the powers of the Controller should be left as they are—I have not much more to say on the subject. I think this will remove a great deal of objection to this instrument."

Ray B. Smith said in self-exoneration that in drafting the financial chapter of the proposed charter the framers had not received the benefit of the Controller's advice.

"We were never asked to co-operate," said Mr. Mathewson bluntly. "I wish I had known beforehand that the committee had changed its mind. I could have saved myself and the committee a great deal of time."

"We found it out only after we had taken the recess," explained Senator Cullen.

A great portion of the afternoon was occupied by a debate, in which Deputy Controller Mathewson and Assistant Corporation Counsel Cornelius F. Collins took part, regarding the propriety of a provision in the Cullen-Foley Charter bill giving the Corporation Counsel the power to settle claims against the city, when the amount is $5,000 or less, without the concurrence of the Controller, as under the present Charter. Mr. Mathewson contended that the co-operative audit in such cases should be continued. Mr. Collins that the power should rest solely with the Corporation Counsel. The debate grew very heated at times, and at one time the Assistant Corporation Counsel exclaimed:

"The trouble with the Controller is that he thinks he is the city."

Mr. Mathewson, when he appeared before the committee, pointed out that mandatory provisions in the Cullen-Foley bill calling for new expenditures would cost the city, roughly estimated, some $3,861,000 annually above its present expenditures. But to offset this, it was shown that the automatic mandatory increases in the Department of Education, for which the Charter framers are in no way held responsible, would be, in round figures, $3,000,000. Mr. Mathewson in conclusion declared that he did not believe there was any necessity for an entire new Charter.

The Tax Collection Transfer.

"There are some good things in this proposed new Charter," said the Deputy Controller, "but those changes could have been effected very well by amendments of a constructive nature to the present Charter."

Objections were made by both Mr. Mathewson and Henry Bruère of the Bureau of Municipal Research to the transfer of the functions of collecting taxes and assessments from the Controller to the City Chamberlain, who under the new Charter would be an elective city official at the head of the Department of the City Treasury.

"We do not object to taking these functions from the Controller," said Mr. Mathewson. "It is not properly the Controller's function; but neither is it the function of a City Treasurer. I believe a department for the collection of city revenues should be established, with a Commissioner at its head, and that this department should collect not only taxes, but all revenues, such as water rates and receipts from docks and ferries."

Mr. Bruère indorsed this and also urged that there was no need to raise the City Chamberlain's salary from $12,000 to $15,000.

The forenoon session of yesterday's hearing was given over to a discussion of the chapters dealing with the Mayor, the Board of Estimate, the Board of Aldermen and the Borough Presidents, which were scheduled for Monday. At the hearing yesterday morning, the committees also received the protest of the charter in the form of resolutions adopted by the Chamber of Commerce at a meeting last week. The protest was brought by a committee headed by James G. Cannon, who in handing over the resolutions merely read a communication in which the committees were urged to give the people more time to study the proposed charter before sending it to final passage. Chairman Cullen informed the Chamber of Commerce Committee that the resolution would receive the most careful consideration.

Lewis H. Pounds, Commissioner of Public Works in the Borough of Brooklyn, Laurence A. Tanzer, representing the Citizens Union; Louis L. Travis, Acting Borough President of Richmond, and H. P. Smith, who said he represented the taxpayers of the Fifth Assembly District in Kings were the other speakers at the forenoon session. Messrs. Pounds and Travis objected to the centralization of power in the Mayor at the expense of the boroughs. Mr. Tanzer protested against the proposition to give the Board of Estimate the power to grant "revocable permits," which he said virtually amounted to franchises. Mr. Smith objected to the charter in toto.

"Please give us your objections in detail," said Chairman Cullen.

Mr. Smith threw up his hands.

"If I attempted that I would be here the rest of the week," he declared.

The hearing will go on to-day.

Objections from Mr. Hubbell.

Charles Bulkley Hubbell, who was the first President of the Board of Education as at present constituted, sent a letter yesterday to Egerton L. Winthrop, now the President of the Board in which he criticised the proposed change to a paid board of seven members. Mr. Hubbell wrote in part:

> The danger that would menace the administration of our school affairs by a paid board would in my opinion be the almost inevitable infusion of political considerations in making the appointments, and thus throw the school system back twenty-five years from the high level of efficiency that it has now reached under your administration and the good men who have been associated with you and preceded you. I do not mean to infer that Mayor Gaynor would for one moment be party to any such consideration, for I am one of those who believe that his service to the city is actuated by the highest and best motives; but Mayor Gaynor has a definite term of office, and there is no certainty that his successor would have his action inspired by the same high purpose.
>
> The provisions of the charter compel the inference that the members of the paid Board of Education would be educational experts. From what rank or walk of life would they be recruited? From our school Principals, than whom are no better in the country? Remembering that they have had little or no experience in business training, and that the public school system is one of the largest and most complex business enterprises in the world, that would be unwise, would it not? Can we expect men with highly successful business careers to be called to the service? They may be, but the proposed charter compels the conclusion that these men shall have had pedagogic experience and knowledge, else why should the functions of the supervisory department be placed in the hands of the members of the Board of Education?

The Citizens Union yesterday sent out an appeal for contributions to a special fund to support its campaign against the proposed charter.

"We need a special fund for our campaign against this ripper bill," the appeal read in part. "The fight is soon to be carried to Albany where the Citizens Union is the only civic organization equipped with an office force."

BUSINESS INSURANCE.

Large Policies Taken Out by Business Concerns on Lives of Their Valuable Employees.

Boston.—An important development of the past few years in the insurance field has been the increasing popularity of so-called business insurance. Many business enterprises owe their existence or success to one man, whose experience, technical knowledge, selling ability, or capital make him an essential asset of the organization. The death of such a man might well prove to be an irreparable loss, and it is to offset this contingency that corporations are taking out insurance policies on the lives of their valuable men.—Boston News Bureau.

AUTO HIT POLICEMAN, THEN SPED AWAY

Comrade Commandeered Another Car and Gave Chase, but Lost the Fugitive.

CHAUFFEUR ARRESTED LATER

Traced by Detective, Who Got Auto Number from Saloon Where It Stopped—Driver Confesses.

Edward F. Donovan, a patrolman of the Eldridge Street Station, was struck about 2 o'clock yesterday morning by a racing automobile while on post at Grand Street and the Bowery. He was hurled thirty feet and badly injured, and the driver of the car put on more speed and disappeared. Late yesterday afternoon detectives arrested Joseph F. Wiggins of 214 West Sixty-seventh Street, a chauffeur for the Carhartt Auto Sales Company, 1,989 Broadway, and he admitted that he was the driver of the car that had struck the officer. As he admitted also to having taken the machine from the Carhartt garage without permission, he was held on charges of felonious assault and grand larceny.

With Wiggins, Frank Barrett of 149 West Sixty-seventh Street, a bellboy at the Hotel Waltham, was arrested, charged with having taken the car with Wiggins, and he will be called upon to answer the charge of grand larceny. There were three other men in the car, two of whom were arrested, but they were released, as they were not concerned in the taking of the machine from the garage or in the injuring of Donovan. They were Alexander Nurr, a fireman of Hook and Ladder 20, and William F. Costa, secretary to James J. Hagan, a Tammany leader.

Wiggins, who is 19 years old, told Acting Capt. Clark at Headquarters that he and Barrett, who is the same age, had taken the car out and gone to a café, where they had many drinks. About 1:30 o'clock he started home through the Bowery. At Grand Street, he said, a milk wagon suddenly crossed the path of the machine. To avoid a collision he swung his car sharply to the left, and a mudguard struck Donovan, who was standing in the middle of the crossing.

Wiggins said he was not aware that he had hit anybody, but the men with him shouted: "Go on! Go on!" and he pushed the car ahead. Further on a rear tire burst, and the car swerved and struck an elevated pillar. Wiggins and his friends tried in vain to make repairs, but they had to take the car back on the rim of the rear wheel, with the radiator, the right headlight, and a water pipe badly damaged.

There were two witnesses to the injury of Donovan, and one of them, Patrolman Bunford, commandeered a newspaper automobile that was standing at the crossing and chased Wiggins's car to Thirty-seventh Street and Third Avenue, where he lost it. While he could not get the number of the machine, as two of the passengers were seated in the back, with their feet hanging over the board, he saw that it was a low gray car of a racing type. A machine answering the description was found in Times Square an hour later, and two men were arrested on suspicion, as they could not give a clear account of their doings in the machine.

Yesterday afternoon Detective De Contillion found that a car bearing the number M1106 had left the café about 1:30 yesterday morning. The number was found to belong to the Carhartt Auto Sales Company, and a visit of three detectives to the garage of that company revealed the fact that the manager was at the moment trying to locate the member of his staff that had taken it out. There were several keys to the garage, so the guilty party had not been identified by the manager. The detectives traced the theft to Wiggins, who confessed and implicated Barrett. He was located at his home, 149 West Sixty-seventh Street, and arrested.

Donovan suffered a serious concussion of the brain and was unconscious for ten hours after being struck. Though at first it was feared that he had received internal injuries, it was said yesterday afternoon that he probably would recover.

Acting Capt. Philip Grossbeck of the Traffic Squad was run down also by a Broadway car at Twenty-second Street as he was giving instructions to Patrolman Kepko in traffic regulation. Kepko turned to motion to a southbound Lexington Avenue car, and when he turned back saw the Captain being rolled along in front of a Broadway car, the fender keeping him from under the wheels.

The Captain started back to the station house, in Ninth Street, but when he reached Sixteenth Street he felt weak and decided to go to the New York Hospital, where he was treated and sent home. His uniform was torn, but his injuries were slight.

IN HOLE, ESCAPED AUTO.

Peculiar Freak of Fortune Saved a Little Girl's Life.

Sadie Shapiro, 7 years old, of 135 East 114th Street, may thank a hole in the street at Park Avenue and 114th Street, for the preservation of her life last night, when she was knocked down and run over by an automobile owned and operated by Dr. Isaac Plotz of 1,722 Madison Avenue. As fate would have it, she is practically uninjured.

Sadie had been sent across Park Avenue on an errand by her mother, who awaited her return on the sidewalk. Mrs. Shapiro saw the auto coming and called to her daughter, but the child did not hear or heed the cry, and before Dr. Plotz could stop the machine it had passed over her.

The mother and the doctor ran at once to the child, and were surprised to find her practically uninjured. The mother and child were taken to their home by the doctor in the car.

GIRL FREES FATHER.

Persuades Court to Change Workhouse Sentence So He Could Support Family.

Samuel Meyerwitz, 40 years old, of 325 East 100th Street, was sent to the Workhouse for five days by Magistrate Appleton in Night Court last night for smoking on an elevated train. Shortly after Meyerwitz had been sentenced a pretty fifteen-year-old girl appeared in the court and asked if she could speak to the Judge.

She told the Magistrate she was Sarah Meyerwitz, eldest daughter of the man who had just been sentenced, and she wanted the Magistrate to let her father off with a fine. If he was sent to the workhouse, she said, her mother, who was suffering from consumption, and her six brothers and sisters would be entirely without means of support.

The Magistrate thereupon remitted the workhouse sentence and imposed a fine, which was paid.

GIRL BATHERS WARNED.

Must Not Promenade Atlantic City Streets in Their Bathing Costumes.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 22.—The thousands of young women who are fond of promenading on the beach and on the streets of this resort clad in bathing suits and high-heeled shoes are sorely distressed to-day over an order which Acting Mayor Carmany has issued.

The order bars the wearer of an undressed bathing suit, no matter how fair she may be, from appearing on the street without a raincoat or a wrap of some kind.
